JAPAN'S TREATY STIRS OFFICIALS AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The State and Navy Departments have been more alarmed by the news of the secret offensive and defensive alliance between Japan and Russia than by any demonstrated events since the promulgation of the open-door policy by the United States.

Both departments know this alliance has made futile the double-standard naval policy which it was thought when put into effect would be a complete check to Japan. By the double standard was meant the throwing of one-half of the American navy into the Pacific, it being assumed that American construction would be always more than double that of Japan.

It is obvious to all the experts that the object of Japan and Russia, openly backed by Great Britain, is to neutralize the power of the United States in the Pacific and among the nations, and it is admitted that if Japan and Russia were to combine and were to rush their battleships under construction the theory of a double standard would have to be replaced by a fact, namely, the transfer of the majority of the American battleships of the first class into the Pacific.

The Navies Compared.

Russia has now on the stocks four Dreadnaughts, and four battleships of the first class. But Russia stands second among the navies of the world in torpedo boat destroyers, of which she has ninety-seven, and torpedo boats, of which she has fifty-six.

Russia has twenty-five submarine torpedo boats, which is seven more than the vessels of that type built by the United States.

Russia and Japan, if they were to hurry their construction programs and combine, would have in the aggregate twenty-two battleships of the first order of efficiency. The United States has now twenty-nine battle ships of the first class.

A high authority here says that the problem is one of the greatest consequence as presented by the re-alignment of the powers in the East.

The AMERICAN called the attention of the administration to what was going on and its results about two months ago.

The Only Remedy.

The AMERICAN'S authority to-day said there was only one way of meeting the new conditions, and that was by a demand on the next Congress for a number of battleships that would perhaps amaze the country but the justification for which was becoming more manifest every day.

He said current history showed Germany intriguing with the Turkish parliament to paralyze American plans for a railway in Persia and Russia, and Japan and Great Britain proved guilty of a plot to shut the door in the face of the United States in Manchuria.

If the plans for universal peace, he said, are not pushed to a conclusion, the United States will have to break all records in a naval construction program at the next Congress, and that while universal peace plans remain in doubt the phenomenal constructive program must be considered by President Taft.

TEACHERS SEE SIGHTS ON LAST DAY OF MEETING

This is the last day of the convention of the National Education Association. Already many of the delegates are packing up and preparing to leave the city, and it is believed that their number will be considerably lessened by the time the last session is opened at 8 o'clock this evening.

At the same time, many of the teachers, rejoicing in the weather conditions, which have made every day seem more pleasant than the preceding one, have decided to stay in Boston over to-morrow and in some cases over Sunday. A large number have found the programs of such a high order that they could not stay away from the many sessions, with the result that they have yet to visit many of the interesting spots of Boston.

For a number of the men, strange as it may seem, the fact that a woman was chosen as the organization leader for the coming year, has proven such a keen disappointment that they have lost interest for the moment in the institution.

But for the great majority of the members Mrs. Young's election as president came as the most cheering of news, and the women, feeling that at last they have asserted themselves and have been recognized as a powerful factor in the association, are eager to carry home the news of the convention.

To-day the preliminary work of clearing out the old Art Museum, the convention headquarters, was begun, and within a few days no signs of the comfort and attractiveness of the big building as made over by the Boston teachers will remain.

To-day twelve sessions are being held.

RUSSIANS HUNT DOWN JEWS WITH BLOODHOUNDS

VIENNA, July 8.—The Russian authorities are hunting down Jews with bloodhounds. The expulsion of Jews from the cities and country outside of the pale is being pushed to the accompaniment of horrors unknown since thre days of American slave hunts, according to fresh advices received to-day by the Semitic leaders here.

Though the Russian censorship remains strict as ever, each message arriving by code or courier adds to the horror of the situation and increases the fears of the Jews in Vienna.

So sternly has the persecution been carried on, according to these advices, that the Jews driven from their homes to the cities of the pale are not safe there.

The duplication of the terible scenes that shocked the world a few years ago is feared.

Efforts are being made to arrange a general protest by prominent Jews and Christians throughout Europe.

SHIPPING AT SALEM.

SALEM, July 8.—During the fiscal year just closed there arrived at the port of this city 1,200 vessels with a total tonnage of 472,000 tons. More than 500 vessels unloaded their cargoes at Salem wharves, and landed about 1,000,000 tons of merchandise.

BARONESS FATALLY INJURED

RHEIMS, July 8.—Baroness de la Roche was fatally injured to-day when flying in a Voison biplane at the aviation meet. Th machine went wrong and plunge straight down 150 feet, tanglin the victim in the debris. She w internally injured and also su tained fractures of the arm a leg.

A great crowd had gone out to Bethany Plains, drawn by the hope of seeing more records broken. The opportunity of witnessing a flight by the famous woman aviator raised the enthusiasm to a high pitch.

She set off in her biplane confident and laughing. It was when at the height of 150 feet that it became evident to the spectators something had gone wrong. In the few moments that the incident occurred the crowds were turned from cheering enthusiasts to a horror-stricken multitude.

The biplane, going at terrific speed, suddenly seemed to halt; it appeared tossed on the wind. Then the machine fell, whirling and tossing.

The crowd swarmed over the field in an instant and the authorities had difficulty in clearing it. Finally a squad of infantrymen forced back the throng.

Badly Hurt Once Before.

A hasty examination of the baroness was made and as soon as the extent of her injuries was ascertained she was hurried to the field hospital.

After a dashing career as an automobilist, in the fast few months the Baroness came to the front as an aviator and earned a name as one of the most daring air pilots. She was the first woman to ascend alone in an aeroplane and the first to take up the sport. On her second flight this daughter of a historic house of France covered four miles, and immediately she began planning more daring feats. Her desire was to duplicate in the air the hardy things she had already accomplished with the automobile. On January 4 last she was badly hurt. While whirling about the course at Pouy, she failed to turn her biplane sharply enough and it went smashing into trees at the side of the field. She was picked up unconscious, her right shoulder dislocated and suffering from internal injuries. Her unusual recuperative powers brought her back to health, however.

A Daring Sportswoman.

From the first day she entered a plane the Baroness's ambition to excel in the new sport was insatiable. Though she had bought her machine in September 1909, two months later she announced her intention of competing for the Michelin trophy. To win, she would have to beat Farman's endurance record, 4 hours 17 minutes. For years she has been known throughout Europe as one of the most daring of sportswomen. She was a pioneer with the motor car and has taken part in race meets, driving against the crack professionals. At one meet she won second place after tooling an eighty-horse power machine in a manner that raised the hair of the spectators.

Motor cycling also received her attention, she being the first woman in France to take to that sport.

Some time ago it was announced that were she declared eligible she would go to America next Fall to take part in the international meet.

LITZ HELD IN $200.

In Dedham court to-day John Litz of Hyde Park was held in $200 for assault upon Alexander Boch and Hendrerick Yuabowiski, both of Hyde Park, last night. He will be given a hearing Monday. Litz is accused of cutting both men.

PORTUGAL RAISES TARIFF.

LISBON, July 8.—The government is preparing a general revision of the tariff. It will double the duties against countries which have no commercial treatries with Portugal and will increase them from 10 to 30 per cent. against others.

225 BOSTON ELKS ON TOUR

Two hundred and twenty-five Elks will get a royal sendoff when they leave the antlered headquarters in Somerset street to-morrow afternoon for the grand lodge meeting and annual reunion of Elks in Detroit. The Boston contingent promises to be one of the strongest delegations to attend the big meet.

The arrangements committee, of which M. J. Murray of Bri[illegible]'s Hotel is chairman, has prepared a number of things to make Boston ring in the ears of the outgoing Elks until they encounter the thunder of Niagara Falls. There will be a reception in the rooms in Somerset street, tendered to the departing ones. In front of the building, a band will play stirring airs. From the headquarters, led by the band, the delegates and their friends will form a line, marching to the State House, down Beacon to Charles, to Boylston, to Tremont, to School, past City Hall, to Washington, to Summer, to the South Station.

An excellent itinerary has been prepared for the delegation. They will leave South Station at 4:30 o'clock, the train going in two sections. Returning, the party will come by way of the lakes through Montreal.

The committee in charge is M. J. Murray, Thomas D. R[illegible], Edward J. Hayden, Joseph J. Nolan and Edward C. Steptoe.

Only three other Sunday papers in the entire United States equal the circulation of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. Circulation books of the SUNDAY AMERICAN open to all.

600 ELKS IN VESSEL ADRIFT ON LAKE ERIE

DETROIT, Mich., July 8.—A wireless message received at noon says that the steamer Eastern States, carrying 750 passengers, 600 of them Elks bound for the convention in this city, is disabled off Long point, Lake Erie, 133 miles from here.

The vessel, which is on its way from Buffalo, was attempting to make port under low pressure steam.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Boston, July 8.—The fans couldn't get up to welcome the Red Sox home fast enough and forgot all about old General Humidity coming to spoil their enjoyment of seeing the idols back at the home spot playing a double-header with such a classy crowd as the Cleveland Naps, leaders of the second division clubs.

There was a whole cartload of attractions to draw the fans to the big show. Two games with the Naps was sufficient, and there was Old Cy Young out to win his 500th game in his twenty years of hard service on the diamond. Leading the Naps was the league batting wonder and peerless second sacker, Napoleon Lajoie, who was worth the price of admission just to watch him gather in difficult plays and murder the ball with his warclub.

Altogether it was a great entertainment for the Summer season and the scorched bleachers were quickly covered by the multitude of fans who wanted to greet the Red Sox after their successful trip among the eastern clubs.

There was regret expressed for Captain Lord and Joe Wood who were disabled but Tris Speaker was back prancing in the centre garden and it was a good sight to see the lively outfielder working in harness once more.

Charlie Hall was the choice to face the Naps in the opening game and the tall twirler was ready to tackle the toughest game they could bring up to him.

The visitors playing better ball than earlier in the year when they got bumped repeatedly were anxious to start their eastern invasion with all the noise they could work up so the Red Sox had trouble on their hands as soon as the signal went up.

ARRESTED AS EMBEZZLER.

Charles J. Hentz of Billerica was arrested to-day by Postoffice Inspector Owings for alleged embezzlement of a letter containing a pension voucher for $36, payable to Margaret T. Young.

There is no relief in sight for sweltering Bostonians, according to the weather man on top of the Federal building. He said to-day the present hot wave would continue, to-morrow being fair. Sunday is scheduled to be fair and warmer.

The mercury at noon stood to-day at 83 on top of the Federal building. On the street the various thermometers recorded 85, and even 88 at the same hour. The humidity, due to the rain of this morning soared above 90, or 20 per cent. more than normal. This caused to-day's oppressiveness.

The coolest spot on the map, according to the weatherman, is Colorado, where the temperature stands at 48 degrees.

In the congested sections of the city the suffering from the heat is unbearable. The streets of the North, South and West Ends are being flushed in order to relieve the children.

SYNDICATE ON FIGHT PICTURES BACKS DOWN

CHICAGO, July 8.—Stirred by the growing sentiment throughout the country against the exhibition of the Jeffries-Johnson fight films, George Kleine, William Selig and George A. Spoor, representatives of the Motion Picture Syndicate have issued this statement:

"No effort will be made to show the pictures in any city or town where adverse legislation has been taken. It will not be necessary to get out injunctions, for this combine does not intend to buck the law in any city or State. We do not think these pictures are any different from those which have displayed the Johnson-Burns and Johnson-Ketchell fights, but if we find that popular sentiment is against them we will lay them on the shelf and not show them at all."

SEVERED IN TWAIN, LIVED AN HOUR

WORCESTER, July 8.—William I'Venture, thirty-three years old, lived for over an hour at the City Hospital with both legs and the lower part of his body missing. He was thus frightfully mangled and lost his life through an attempt to save the life of John Delfson, a brakeman, who had slipped and fallen beneath the cars at the Lincoln square freight yard.

CITY SUN PAVILION FOR CONSUMPTIVES

PORTLAND, Me., July 8.—It has been decided by the committee on public buildings to construct a sun pavilion at the city home for the benefit of the poor there who are suffering from tuberculosis. It is expected that it will greatly help to check the disease in many cases and will assist in the earlier stages to effect a cure.

BOSTON BANKS SUED IN SOUTHBRIDGE CASE

WORCESTER, July 8.—Suits for $20,000 each were entered in the Superior Court to-day by the trustees of the Southbridge Savings Bank against the Eliot National Bank of Boston and Hayden, Stone & Co. of Boston, to recover money it is claimed was wrongfully used in dealings with the Boston concerns by John A. Hall, the defaulting treasurer of the Southbridge Savings Bank. The suits are from the law office of Choate, Hall & Stewart of Boston.

QUEENSBERRY'S SON IS "BROKE" AGAIN

SPOKANE, Wash., July 8.—Declaring that he has spent his second fortune, estimated between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000, on his wife formerly a New York variety actress, and now has lost her, Lord Sholto Douglas, son of the Marquis of Queensberry, has left for British Columbia, where he will take his place in a Canadian Pacific railway surveying crew for three months. He needs the solitude to help him forget his troubles, he says, and the $2 a day to enable him to eat.

"COL. BILL" GREENE IN MINES AGAIN

EL PASO, Tex., July 8.—Information was received here to-day from Maco, Ari., that W. C. Greene has left London for Cananea, Mex., his home, with a letter of credit for $30,000,000, to be used in developing mining property in Mexico. When Greene failed he had to give up many properties, which were secured by Dr. F. S. Pearson of New York. Now he has secured money to develop the others.

DANCING BARRED BY LIBRARY BEQUEST

WORCESTER, July 8.—Dancing must be excluded from entertainments given in the building of the library at West Falmouth if that institution is to receive the income of $8,000 bequeathed to it by D. Wheeler Swift of this city, a pioneer envelope manufacturer, who died recently. The will makes this provision and also stipulates that the money must be used for the purchase of books of a nature to uplift and educate the readers.

CURTISS FLIES EIGHT MILES OVER OCEAN

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 8.—Glenn H. Curtiss thrilled thousands of spectators to-day when he made a daring flight in his aeroplane over the ocean. In ten minutes he covered eight miles and then descended.

Fifteen minutes after a booming gun had announced that Curtiss was about to fly he soared 150 feet into the air, swung gracefully around, mounted skyward another hundred feet and continued out a half mile to sea, where he turned up the coast toward the inlet, dipping dangerously several times as the air currents swept out between the big hotels.

Shooting a mile out over the ocean Curtiss described an arc toward the board walk and returned toward his starting point, flying in a favorable current 300 feet from the sea surface. Reaching the Ocean pier he turned toward the board walk, flying low and directly over the wooden decking of the structure until a few hundred feet from the shore. Again he darted down town, speeding like an express train 200 feet in the air. He circled birdlike above the million dollar pier, while the crowds on the board walk and beach cheered him to the echo. Acknowledging their applause with a wave of his hand, Curtiss flew south as far as Ventnor, keeping in near the board walk.

Swinging out to sea again the aviator dashed out toward the end of the pier and turned up town keeping in a direct line until he reached the pier again, where he circled a mile out to sea, taking quick circles to delight the board walk crowds. He reached the Ocean pier and then speeded for his landing place, settling like an immense dragon fly in the very marks he made in the sand on his take-off.

Later five thousand spectators were excited by a daring aerial race between Curtiss, in his own type of aeroplane and Walter Brooklins in a Wright biplane. They raced along the beach one above the other between the two Youngs' piers. Curtiss easily outdistanced the heavier Wright machine.

When the two machines started along the beach Brooklins attempted to beat his opponent, but the Curtiss machine quickly proved the speedier. Brooklins then made some graceful figure evolutions to please the crowd. One of the $5,000 prizes being contested for here is for a fifty-mile ocean speed record and the other for the Atlantic City altitude record, the later to beat the world's altitude record.

VANDERBILT'S LAWN FETE SPLITS CHURCH

NEWPORT, July 8.—A great row has developed over the lawn fete given at Oakland farm Wednesday for St. Mary's Church of South Portsmouth.

Trouble broke out when the Summer residents learned that St. Mary's Church is to have a lawn fete at the farm home of Mrs. William R. Hunter in Middletown next Wednesday.

When the fete was given Wednesday the church members were not consulted. Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Vanderbilt were asked by the Rev. Frederick N. Goodman, the rector, to be in charge, and not being apprised of the church troubles, they went into the fete, and their efforts with those of their friends from Newport, worked success financially and socially.

FIRST CORPS GOES IN CAMP AT HINGHAM

The First Corps of Cadets left to-day for Hingham, where they will spend a week in camp. The members of the corps assembled at the armory on Columbus avenue at 4:30 a. m., and an hour later marched through Columbus avenue, Park square, Boylston, Tremont, Winter and Summer streets to the South station, where the train was taken. Lieutenant Colonel Joy was in command, and the full strength of the party numbered about five hundred.

DR. WILLIAM J. ROLFE, SCHOLAR, IS DEAD

VINEYARD HAVEN, July 8.—Dr. William J. Rolfe of Cambridge, one of the most noted American authorities on Shakespeare and his plays, died at the home of his son in Tisbury of old age. Dr. Rolfe was probably the first teacher to introduce the study of the English classics into a preparatory school.

He was principal of the high school in Dorchester in the days before the Civil War, principal of the high school at Lawrence and of Cambridge High.

POLICEMAN'S BULLET CAUSES A DEATH

A bullet from the revolver of Patrolman Michael Sullivan, fired on June 29, caused the death of Joseph Benson, twenty-eight, of Cambridge, in the City Hospital. Benson, with two companions, was discovered by the patrolman stealing iron spikes in the Cottage Farm yard of the Boston & Albany railroad. When he threatened to shoot the officer, Sullivan drew his revolver and fired.

WOMAN LOSES AUTO LICENSE

The Highway Commission has revoked the registration certificate held by Miss Kathryn Strong of Springfield, because she permitted her sister, Miss Marjorie Strong, who has no license to run a machine, to operate her automobile, which led to the accident by which Mary Kelly of Springfield lost her life on June 21. Miss Strong has an operator's license, but it expired on December 31 last, and had not been renewed.

NEW ECZEMA REMEDY

Stops Itching at Once

The new remedy Cadum has astonished the medical world. Many cures of eczema and other distressing skin diseases are reported, and the remarkable feature in most cases is the quickness of the cure. Eczema is not a blood disease, but a skin affection. It cannot be cured by internal medicines. External treatment is absolutely necessary. Since the introduction of Cadum eczema is now recognized as a curable disease, and that tormenting affliction has been robbed of its terrors. Cadum stops the itching at once and begins the healing process with the first application. It destroys disease germs, allays inflammation and is soothing and healing to the skin. From the moment it is applied to any skin trouble immediate relief is felt. It is for pimples, blotches, hives, tetter, itch, acne, herpes, scaly skin, psoriasis, rash, chafings, eruptions, sores, scurvy, scabs, blackheads, itching piles, etc. Trial box 10c.; large box 25c.; all druggists.

200 IN HARBOR TRIP TO-DAY ON HOSPITAL SHIP

To-day's trip on the Floating Hospital was a record breaker, more than 200 mothers and children taking advantage of the cooling winds down the harbor. Youngsters of all ages and sizes, races and creeds received the careful attention of the nurses.

Yesterday 197 children and their mothers were cared for on the daily sail. No sick child after passing the examination of the physicians has been debarred on account of room, but the preparations for the daily work are so well handled that more needy cases this year are taken care of than before.

The capacity of the boat allows 256 children and 130 mothers. All kinds of amusements have been arranged for the youngsters who are able to play. The little invalids who are braced up on pillows in their cots are given picture books and other toys. The nurses are on the watch all the time, and everything is looked after in a very efficient manner.

The daily expenses are paid for by public subscriptions. Many of the wealthy residents of Boston and vicinity often send sufficient funds to cover the daily expense. Contributions may be sent to C. Lee, of Lee, Higginson & Co.

Leaders in charity work of Boston and vicinity agree that the Floating Hospital is perhaps one of the greatest charities in the country. Hundreds of babies, from two weeks up to a year old, receive the tender care of the nurses. Pure wholesome milk is provided for the little ones.

Many babies who have been in a very week condition have been made strong. No expense is spared for the cost of food. Many mothers in fairly comfortable circumstances have sent their little ones on the ship, and have aided somewhat towards the expense of caring for their flocks.

The Floating Hospital will make daily trips when the weather permits. Mothers having delicate children are cordially invited to take these trips.

FEARED DROWNING, BURNED TO DEATH

PASCOAG, R. I., July 8.—Preferring to take her chances of being burned to death rather than jump into deep water when she was unable to swim, Laura Bevens, seventeen years old, was fatally burned here. The girl in throwing wood on a fire at the camp of her brother-in-law, Charles Tucker, at Echo Lake, set her clothes afire.

She was evidently afraid to jump in the water, and running back to the house made a futile attempt to smother the flames by rolling in a bed. Her screams attracted the occupant of an adjoining camp, who brought water from the lake and threw it upon her. No one was at the camp at the time, except the girl's sister, who fainted upon seeing her in flames.

NATHANIEL THAYER IS ILL AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT, July 8.—Nathaniel Thayer of Boston, whose daughters are Mrs. William S. Patten, the Countess von Moltke and Miss Sallie Thayer, is one of three notable and wealthy Summer residents whose health is a matter of grave concern. Richard T. Wilson, father-in-law of Mrs. Richard T. Wilson, Jr., who was Miss Marian Mason of Boston and father of Mrs. Ogden Goelet and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., is also ill. The same applies to Samuel F. Barger, father of Mrs. Barger-Wallach, and the friends of all three are greatly worried about them.

ERROR IN LYMAN SCHOOL INQUIRY

The report published in Boston newspapers to the effect that Mrs. Christina Page, who filed a petition with the special legislative committee conducting the Lyman School investigation asking that corporal punishment be abolished in that institution, represented the Boston Equal Suffrage Association, was erroneous. The officers of that association say that the question of the Lyman School inquiry has not been brought either before the general membership or the executive board of the society. While Mrs. Page is a member of the association, she did not represent it officially at the hearings, they say.

EXTRA! GOLF AT BEVERLY!

BEVERLY, July 8.—The vacation lid remained clamped on at the Summer capitol to-day. The official mail remained unopened, and President Taft went a-golfing at the Myopia Hunt Club. He played to-day with John Hays Hammond, and Captain Butt, his military aide.

Since Pa Taft put the "Never again!" sign on the tiny sailboat Bandit, belonging to his young son, Charlie Taft has been sighing to go to sea again. To-day he had his wish, when a perfectly seaworthy power boat, twenty-five feet long with a low-powered engine arrived, and he took command. With some sailors from the President's yacht Sylph Charlie went fishing.

Mrs. Taft is entertaining to-day Mrs. R. A. Ray and Mrs. D. L. McClintock, both of Washington.

No visitors, official, social or political, will see President Taft for the next two weeks unless the insurgents go on the warpath, or some one runs off with the United States Treasury.

ARKANSANS LYNCH NEGRO ROBBER

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 8.—Samuel Powell, a negro charged with robbery and arson, was hanged by a mob at Hutting, according to a dispatch received here.

Powell, eighteen years old, robbed the home of a prominent citizen of Hutting of $400 and then fired the building. He confessed, the police say.

The frail prison which housed Powell was broken into without much effort by the mob. The fact that the negro had been hanged was not generally known until his body was found.

DEFEAT CHURCH SOCIETY MERGER

There will be no coalition of the Epworth League and the Y. P. S. C. E., according to the members of the Board of Control of the Epworth League, who at a meeting at the People's Palace, listened to Secretary Shaw of the Y. P. S. C. E. and thereafter declined to consider the question in any way.

At a reception at the First Church on Temple street, the speakers referred to the subject by saying that the work being done by the young people of the Methodist churches would continue as in the past and under the name of Epworth League.

ROOSEVELT "BEST SELLER"

HAMMOND, Ind., July 8.—The W. B. Conkey Company, publishers, have taken a contract for printing 1,000,000 copies of "Roosevelt in Africa" for Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. It is said that this is the largest single order ever given.

HARMON READY IF PARTY CALLS

CHARLEVOIX, Mich., July 8.—At the close of a political meeting here Governor Harmon of Ohio, in a chat with friends, said he would be a candidate for the presidency on the Democratic ticket in 1912 if it came as a party call.

"It is all the matter of party duty with me now," he said. He is spending the Summer at his cottage here.

ADMITS DEAF MINISTER.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Labor Cable directed the admission to this country of the Rev. Karl Olsen, a Norwegian clergyman refused admission by the immigration authorities at Ellis Island on the ground that because he cannot hear he might become a public charge. Mr. Olsen appealed to Washington and the ruling was the result.

WOMAN SIGNALS HER SUICIDE

Setting her kitchen shade, as she told neighbors she would do in case she was in trouble, Miss Elizabeth Johnson, sixty-three, drank carbolic acid and died in her home at No. 310 Vinton street, Melrose Highlands.

Miss Johnson recently told a neighbor, Mrs. Harry Gerrish, that if she was ever sick she would leave a curtain in one of the kitchen windows drawn in a certain way. Mrs. Gerrish saw that the curtain had been drawn that way, and she and her husband went to Miss Johnson's house and found her dead.

The woman left notes addressed to Albert J. Walton, an undertaker, giving instructions about casket and robe; the Rev. Harold Marshall, pastor of the Universalist Church, asking him to conduct the service, and Miss Sarah Litchfield of North Scituate, who is asked to take charge of the funeral arrangements.

Take Advantage of This Big $5.75 Sale Outing Suits

Regular $10.00 and $12.00 Suits 5.75

Regular $13.50 and $15.00 Suits 7.75

Regular $16.50 and $18.00 Suits 9.75

THIS sale of Outing Suits is an immense thing—the biggest and most sensational event of its kind ever projected in Boston.

You'll be amazed when you see what handsome Suits $7.75 and $9.75 will buy in this sale, and you'll wonder how on earth we can sell them so absurdly cheap.

It's simply another conquest of ours. A big New York maker, with an enormous stock of Outing Suits on hand, was almost driven to desperation over the adverse weather conditions during May and June, and was forced to make a shocking sacrifice of his overplus. That is why these suits are here and at these prices.

They are brand new 1910 Summer styles in Homespuns, Crashes, Flannels, Tweeds, Cassimeres, etc. The $10 and $12 Suits are $5.75; the $13.50 and $15 Suits are $7.75; the $16.50 and $18 Suits are $9.75.

No one will be disappointed — we have these Suits in all sizes. No C. O. D.'s. No refunds.

"I FEEL LIKE A COLT," SAYS JOHN D. AT 71

CLEVELAND, O., July 8.—"Why, I feel like a colt. And that's all I am, too. You know, Dr. Biggar said I'd probably live to be a 100. I certainly shall if I keep on feeling like this."

This was what John D. Rockefeller had to say to-day on his birthday. He is now seventy-one years old.

Mr. Rockefeller was up early at his Summer home, Forest Hill. Before he had breakfasted messages of congratulation from prominent men in America and Europe began to arrive—the first of a steady stream. The Oil King followed his usual program for his birthday in that he had no program at all. His desire was to pass the day quietly, receiving only a few close friends and relatives. After taking a brisk turn about the grounds Mr. Rockefeller declared that he felt as well as he did thirty years ago.

"I'm as confident as Wu Ting Fang," he said. "You remember that when he left America a few months ago he said he'd drop in on us again in 1959? Well, I'm quite sure that when he does, I'll be on the pier to welcome him."

Mr. Rockefeller proved his claims to good health when at the table. His appetite would certainly give no alarm to his physicians. A spin in an auto was a feature of the day. As he was whirled out, the employes of the estate greeted him with a show of affection. He smiled at them [illegible] and waved his hand as he

POLICE SEARCH FOR LOWELL SCHOOLBOY

LOWELL, July 8.—John Henry Sullivan, twelve years old, who made his home with Mrs. D. J. McCarthy of No. 559 Broadway, has been missing from home since June 25. The police have been on the lookout for him, but have found no trace of his whereabouts. When he left home Sullivan wore a black suit, dark cap and black shoes. He is of medium complexion. He was a pupil in the Bartlett Grammar School and was exceedingly bright.

TO WOMEN AT FORTY

The Experience of This Philadelphia Woman Will Show the Way to Avoid Unnecessary Ill Health.

To women who suffer when the age of forty, or thereabouts, is reached, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give prompt and permanent relief. And, if taken as this time is approached, their tonic action in purifying and building up the blood strengthens the system so that this crisis in a woman's life may be passed in safety and ease. The pills, therefore, are of special help to women who are weak, run down and nervous for in this condition the body is not prepared to bear the added burden put upon it during the change of life.

Mrs. M. H. Cornelis, of No. 2505 Oxford street, Philadelphia, Pa., who found no relief from her suffering until she tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, says:

"I suffered for over two years from weakness common to women of my age and was confined to bed for two or three days every month. I had a poor appetite, gas formed in my stomach and my heart was affected so that I could not go up stairs without gasping for breath. I had severe headaches every month and while they lasted I was unable to do up my hair.

"I tried at least half a dozen remedies before I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I received no benefit whatever from the other medicines but soon found that the pills were helping me. I continued with the pills until cured and have stayed well since. I now always keep Dr. Williams' Pink Pills on hand."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been so successful in curing the characteristic ailments of womankind that they are justly regarded as a specific for anemia or bloodlessness, chlorosis or green sickness, delayed development and all irregularities arising from impure or watery blood and weak nerves. It is through the blood alone that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills act, enabling the vital fluid to carry health and strength to the weakened organs.

For complete information about the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in your case, send a postal card request for our free booklet, "Plain Talks to Women."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Wolf's, "My Clothier," corner Hanover and Portland streets, is most easily reached from the Haymarket Square, Adams Square, Scollay Square and Friend-Union street stations of the subways.

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS CALLED DOWN AS 'LAZY'

While the National Educational Association is meeting in Boston, and the best methods of developing the youth for their work in the world is being discussed, the Free Employment Bureau of the Commonwealth comes forward with a few remarks which reflect considerably upon the graduates of the schools, their aims and ambitions.

In a report issued to-day it is suggested that the grammar and high school graduates who have started out to look for work since they collected their sheepskin a few weeks ago are going about it in the wrong way.

They are looking for soft snaps. They want short hours and good pay and will accept such places in preference to positions from which they might work up to high posts.

"Now that graduation time is over there are a great many young people who are seeking employment: the girls at office work usually and the boys to learn trades. But there are many who will accept anything where the hours are not too long, the work not too strenuous and the pay good. Their aim seems to be to get good pay rather than a chance to learn to be useful industrial units in after life. When they are twenty-five or more years old when it is too late to begin an apprenticeship; they will realize their mistake.

"Parents and guardians show too much indifference both before and after graduation, and the boy and girl are too often left to shift for themselves. The youth should be apprenticed in that occupation in which is shown the most aptitude intellectually, morally and physically, consistent with the financial ability of their sponsors."

Oak Tree for Coffin.

MUNCIE, Ind., July 8.—A giant oak tree that had grown from a sapling planted seventy-five years ago to its present size will encase the body of Cary Fenwick, aged seventy-seven. His sons to-day cut down the great tree, which grew in the dooryard of the family homestead, and they are fashioning it into a coffin. A special hearse will be required to convey the coffin to the cemetery.

Pays Debt 46 Years Old.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Mrs. Carrie L. Searles of No. 72 East Jersey street, Elizabeth, N. J., was living in Mansfield, O., forty-six years ago. She was a widow with one son, without much money. She bought $5 worth of goods at a store there and said she would pay for them when she could. This was agreed to by Black Bros., the proprietors. A few days ago Mrs. Searles sent the firm a letter, inclosing the $5.

TEACHERS BUSY WITH LAST DAY'S WORK

The balance of the day will be given over to the final trips of sight-seeing. At Tremont Temple this evening President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard will speak on "The Value During Education of a Life Motive" and Mrs. W. N. Hutt of North Carolina will give an address on "Education of Women for Homemaking."

Golden Gate Next Year.

The closing exercises of the convention will then be held, and Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, the president-elect, will be formally installed in office.

The news that the convention will meet in San Francisco has been met with smiles by the teachers. The convention was held in Denver last year, and at that time San Francisco was chosen for 1910. But it was later found that proper accommodations could not be found, and the city of the Golden Gate was disappointed, Boston being her successful rival.

But this year a strong delegation came to Boston from San Francisco, and from the opening day it's members have been busy every minute persuading the convention that their city would be the happy place for next year's assembly.

In fact, so strong was the position of San Francisco that no other city dared enter the contest. Moreover, the hearty reception given by Boston and the lavishness with which the visitors have been entertained while in this city made many of the representatives of the larger cities of the country backward about attempting the entertainment of the guests next year, as they feared their efforts would suffer by comparison.

Butler Again a Director.

The promised fight in the board of directors over the proposed re-election of Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia, as the chairman of the board of trustees, did not materialize.

In this fight to down President Butler, whose relations have not been pleasant with all of the trustees, a strong faction which had aided Mrs. Young in her victory was anxious to defeat Mr. Butler.

Augustus S. Downing of New York city stated that Mr. Butler would not accept re-election. Many members of the board of directors, knowing that there was a sentiment against the well-known educator, urged his election before the vote was taken. There seemed to be no desire to force the issue by the faction which had darkly hinted at a refusal by the directors to return him to the high position, and Mr. Butler was re-elected unanimously.

There is still some doubt as to whether he will accept.

SAY JANITORS ARE HALF THE PROBLEM OF DULL CHILDREN

The school janitor "got his'n" to-day from the National Education Association.

The speakers at the convention sessions have talked freely during the week about themselves, their pupils and methods of teaching. They have criticised liberally where criticism was due. On this, the final day, the school janitor came in for a few pointed comments.

This occurred at the session of the Science Instruction Department in Huntington Hall. The speaker was Dr. Helen C. Putnam of Providence. She is chairman of the educational section of the American Association for the Study and Prevention of Infant Mortality. She spoke on "The Problem of Janitor Service." An abstract of her address is as follows:

"Janitors are half of the problem of hygiene, backward children and school fatigue.

"School temperatures between 70 degrees and 80 degrees in Winter create popular demand for over-heated houses, public buildings and conveyances; dusty heavy air trains for badly ventilated homes and shops—notwithstanding recitations to the contrary.

"Health habits educate more than health maxims.

"Over-heating, dust and foul air invite dullness, headache, catarrh, 'sore throats,' adenoid conditions, bronchitis, 'colds,' tuberculosis. The highest death rate from tuberculosis in any profession is among teachers in this country and Canada. It is not so in Europe, where both homes and schools are cooler. England requires a school temperature of 60 degrees. A few of our schools require from 65 to 68 degrees. Some teachers insist on their rooms being disconnected from the heating system in order to use their windows when necessary, heat from corridors being ample."

Many Janitors Untrained.

"Some janitors have engineers' licenses. No schools require janitors to have adequate training in principles and methods of sanitary care of school premises, although their salaries are often larger than teachers'. School laws should make trained care takers compulsory, by civil service examination or otherwise."

Vigorous remarks about school children being taught to work were made by James M. Greenwood, superintendent of schools in Kansas City, Mo. He spoke before the department of elementary education in the South Congregational Church. His topic was "Strengthening the Work of the Seventh and Eighth Grades to Fit for High School." He said in part:

"Our present system of teaching has produced a luxuriant crop of spineless and animated nobodies in our country because our children are not taught to work. Clearness, distinctness, and persistence in knowing and thinking are lost attributes in our methods of study and discipline.

"Children should be put to doing things and kept at them till they can do them fairly well. Studies should be chosen which have an abiding value, and permanent elements should be selected. A stage has been reached when constructive ability should be invoked. Too much material has been introduced, but elimination does not offer a satisfactory solution. The difficulty lies largely in the attitude of the teachers who handle the subject matter and the superintendents who plan it.

"Rebuilding English Course."

The vexed question of why pupils are lacking in English came up again to-day when Edwin L. Miller of Detroit spoke on "Rebuilding an English Course." He was speaking before the department of secondary education in the Central Congregational Church. He said in part:

"The general dissatisfaction with the results secured in high schools from the teaching of English is due to causes which are in part too radical to be removed, and in part to causes which can be eliminated. Of the latter we have been confronted in Detroit with four: Lack of equipment, lack of teachers, lack of time, lack of organization. We lack books, pictures, literary atmosphere; our teachers are overworked; our scholars have not allowed sufficient time to the study of English; the organization of our work has been wasteful. These conditions prevail almost everywhere."

HETTY GREEN'S SON A FINANCIAL POWER

NEW YORK, July 7.—Edward H. R. Green, son of Hetty Green, has begun to step into a position in the local financial world which his mother's millions long ago would have entitled him to had he not spent the last seventeen years in Texas. Recently it was announced that because of Mrs. Green's advancing age—she is now seventy-five—her son would come on to this city to look after her great interests, and he has been elected a director of the Seaboard National Board of this city.

IS, THE UNITED SHOE MACHINERY COMPANY AN ILLEGAL TRUST AND MONOPOLY?

ARE ITS SO-CALLED LEASES VALID AND BINDING OR ILLEGAL AND UNENFORCEABLE?

EMINENT LAWYERS WHO HAVE EXAMINED THE SUBJECT HAVE GIVEN OPINIONS ON THESE QUESTIONS.

Opinion of Messrs. Gaston, Snow & Saltonstall, Legal Advisers of Endicott, Johnson Company, Shoe Manufacturers, and Certain Financial Interests,—in No Way Connected with or Consulted by Mr. Plant or His Interests.

Messrs. Endicott, Johnson & Co., 76 Lincoln Street, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir:

We have examined your contracts with the United Shoe Machinery Company, and are of opinion that these contracts are in violation of the Sherman Act, so called; that they are illegal and void, and that if you choose to give up the shoe machinery which you hold under them no action can be successfully maintained against you by reason thereof.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Yours, very truly,
GASTON, SNOW & SALTONSTALL.

Opinion of Sherman L. Whipple, Esq.

In relation to the validity or invalidity of the so-called leases of the United Shoe Machinery Company, I beg to say that in my opinion they are invalid and unenforceable.

Some years ago at Mr. Plant's request I examined with considerable care several different forms of these leases, together with the cases interpreting the Sherman Act which had been decided up to that time. I was then of the opinion that the leases were invalid. Since then, I have followed the decisions interpreting that Act, and more recently have again reviewed the business methods and leases of the United Company. I have found nothing in any case decided or in any facts revealed by my investigations to change or modify my original opinion.

There are two grounds upon either of which it is clear that these leases are illegal and unenforceable.

First, because the United Company, as organized, is itself a combination in restraint of trade, existing in violation of law. The leases are therefore invalid, because they are agreements which the United Company requires its lessees to sign in carrying into effect the scheme or plan for building up and maintaining its illegal monopoly.

Second, because apart from the illegal constitution and organization of the United Company as a trust, the so-called leases in themselves tend to restrain and monopolize trade and commerce, and combined with other methods directed to the same purpose, they have created and now sustain an illegal monopoly in shoe machinery."

Very truly yours,
SHERMAN L. WHIPPLE.

Opinion of George J. Carr, Esq., of New York City.

"I have examined with especial care the various forms (and I think all the forms) of leases of shoe machinery signed by the United Shoe Machinery Company and shoe manufacturers throughout the United States. I have given full consideration to the fact that these leases or agreements grant licenses under various letters patent and that some of the machines which are the subject of the agreements contain inventions of which the United Shoe Machinery Company has an exclusive patent monopoly. In relation to and as affecting the validity of these agreements I have examined with great care the various decisions of the Courts interpreting the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, so called, especially those decisions dealing with the rights of patentees. I AM OF THE OPINION THAT THESE AGREEMENTS ARE ILLEGAL UNDER THAT ACT, AND THAT NONE OF THE TERMS OF ANY OF THE LEASES CAN BE ENFORCED AGAINST ANY LESSEE.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

It is interesting to note that the Court in the course of its opinion in this case (Blount Mfg. Co. v. Yale & Towne Mfg. Co. 166 Fed. 555) said:

"Is it possible that the manufacturers of * * * shoe machinery * * * are without the scope of the Sherman Act for the reason that their machines generally 'embody one or more patented improvements?' * * * The reasons for enacting the Sherman law seem quite as applicable to articles of this character as to articles having no connection with patents.

Very truly yours,
GEORGE J. CARR.

Opinion of Messrs. Brandeis, Dunbar & Nutter, Counsel for Charles H. Jones, President of the Commonwealth Shoe & Leather Company—Entirely unconnected with the Plant interests.

For the reasons set forth we reach the following conclusions:—

FIRST:	The United Shoe Machinery Company is a combination in restraint of trade, and all contracts made by it, as essential parts of the combination or to carry out the purpose of monopolizing and perpetuating its monopoly of the shoe machinery trade, are unlawful. The leases used are such contracts and are unlawful.
SECOND:	The leases are in themselves, aside from the unlawful combinations embodied in the United Shoe Machinery Company, restraints on interstate trade within the Sherman Act.
THIRD:	The fact that the United Shoe Machinery Company was formed to deal in patented articles does not prevent the illegality of the combination, nor does the fact that the leases are of patented machines render them legal; since the purpose of the combination and the provisions of the leases are designed to create a monopoly beyond that conferred by the Patent Laws.
FOURTH:	The leases being invalid, you can not be held liable for failure to perform.

Has the United Shoe Machinery Company in Reality the Boasted Patent Monopoly Which It Claims?

Are the Wonder Worker Machines Infringements or Do They, in Fact, Embody Designs and Methods in Shoe Making so Far Advanced Beyond Existing Methods as to Render the Patents of the United Company Largely Obsolete and Ineffective?

READ THE OPINIONS IN ANSWER TO THESE QUESTIONS OF EMINENT PATENT COUNSEL.

Opinion of Robert P. Hains, Esq., Formerly Principal Examiner United States Patent Office.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

In my judgment the patents granted to Mr. Plant fully and comprehensively protect his machines and give to him the exclusive right to their manufacture, sale and use as contemplated by Statute; while on the other hand his machines are free from the charge of infringement of any existing patents on which an injunction might be asked.

Yours, very truly,
ROBERT P. HAINS.

Opinion of Frederick L. Emery, Esq., of Messrs. Emery, Booth, Janney & Varney, Patent Attorneys.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

I repeat with entire confidence * * * that the United Shoe Machinery Company will never by any patent suit or combination of patent suits be able to obtain any injunction or injunctions that will restrain the use of Mr. Plant's machinery in substantially the form in which it now exists.

In my opinion Mr. Plant's machines embody designs and methods in shoe making so far advanced beyond existing methods as to render the patents of the United Company largely obsolete and ineffective.

Mr. Plant is also fully protected in respect of his own inventions. He has more than 600 United States and foreign patents, many of them of broad scope, fully covering his entire line of new and improved machinery.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Very truly yours,
FREDERICK L. EMERY.

Opinion of Livingston Gifford, Esq., of Gifford & Bull, Patent Counsel, New York City.

Thomas G. Plant, Esq.

Dear Sir:

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

I understand that Mr. Emery has personally explained * * * the precautions that were taken to avoid infringement in your machines of any outstanding patents and particularly those of the United Shoe Machinery Company. The modus operandi was this: Whenever a question of infringement arose in the construction of your machines, Mr. Emery came to New York with all his papers and he and I discussed the matter exhaustively and in every case adopted the conservative policy of being on the safe side by eliminating from your machines all features of resemblance to existing patents excepting such as were clearly justified by the prior act, as shown by expired patents. I understand that this discussion covered machines for all branches of your work, and therefore, basing my judgment upon the preliminary work of Mr. Emery, I believe that all of the machines submitted to me are free from infringement.

Yours very truly,
LIVINGSTON GIFFORD.

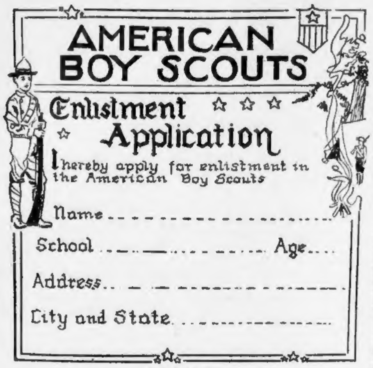
PICK OF NEW ENGLAND YOUTH IN GREAT RUSH TO JOIN BOY SCOUTS



AMERICAN BOY SCOUTS

Enlistment Application

I hereby apply for enlistment in the American Boy Scouts

Name ....

School .... Age....

Address ....

City and State ....

Wheeling into line, organizing their patrols and eager for the active work of scouting, sixty-two New England boys yesterday notified the American Boy Scout headquarters at No. 5 Bromfield street, that they are ready for the war.

H. R. Lyon, who is in charge of the splendid Lincoln House and its work at No. 80 Emerald street, called with the pleasant news that he had forty-two boys already enlisted and wanted to have application blanks for as many more.

"It is a great, splendid movement for our New England boys," he said. "I see in it and the magnificent response the boys are making that promise of a far, far greater Boston and New England which a glorious past makes so logical. We are waking up. Lincoln House and her boys are with you in this great movement."

Letter from a Scout.

This is a movement of boys, by boys and for boys. They read something what a fellow scout has to say or write with a large interest. Such a letter comes from Aubrey S. McLellan, one of the brightest, enthusiastic, snappiest lads in the movement. Scout McLellan writes:

"I believe the American Boy Scout movement is a winner. For the past two years I have been in the Boys' Brigade and my company was organized in 1908.

"I am quarter-master-sergeant and have charge of the property of Company K, First Massachusetts Regiment of Infantry, Massachusetts Division, United Boys' Brigade of America.

"So much for that. I hope to do as well in the American Boy Scout movement.

"If a man or boy loves his country he is willing to give the last drop of his blood and energy for it. We want that spirit for the American Boy Scout movement. We want good boys who will be faithful in the discharge of their duty.

Many Letters Received.

Enough letters to fill this paper several times, all of them interesting, all reflecting in the most beautiful way the mind of the growing New England boy, the citizen and soldier of to-morrow, are filed in the New England Headquarters.

Men have called there in doubtful mood as to the expediency of the movement. With a cautious spirit they have asked to be told how the Scout Movement can do a work not already covered by the Boys' Brigade and like organizations.

But after a few minutes' personal conversation with the high types of boys thronging headquarters and a reference to the letters sent in, they change into enthusiasts.

The Boys' Brigade is doing and has done a magnificent work. The path of the Scout Movement is a paralel one—one that will never cross it. The finest spirit of co-operation has been shown so far by hundreds of Brigade boys coming into the Scout Movement as individuals and in whole patrols.

It is so with other organizations. The boys begin to realize that the big men back of this movement have planned something away above the average and they propose to get into a good thing.

Send In Your Names, Boys!

So send your applications along, boys. Fill them out right away. Mail them at once.

The boys who have finished their patrols are requested to register them without delay. If possible to get the ten boys together the leader is requested to report with them at headquarters between the hours of 10 and 4 o'clock and have the scouts photographed as an organized patrol.

Don't forget next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN, lads. It has a full page devoted to the Boy Scouts, with some pictures that will make you anxious to join. Make your parents read it. Show them the pictures which show the kind of boys who are getting into the movement—the finest in Boston and New England.

ENLIST TO-DAY. BE A SCOUT.

WANT PLAYGROUND OUT IN BRIGHTON

Residents of Brighton and North Brighton are to present a petition to Mayor John F. Fitzgerald for the establishment of a playground in the Brighton section.

Many prominent taxpayers have signed the petition.

A favorite site is being mentioned for this purpose in the Market street section. This according to the petitioners would be the most centrally located plot in the entire section, and ould be the most convenient to the largest number.

Stomach Ache and Diarrhœa

These common summer ailments are generally caused by the system trying to rid itself of some injurious or indigestible material which has been imprudently taken into the stomach, gulping down iced drinks and sudden changes in the weather.

The discomforts and suffering which result are easily prevented and quickly cured by Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, the great family medicine. It is an invaluable tonic for all people who suffer from the heat. It brings restful sleep, cools the blood and tones up and strengthens the whole system.

Dr. Lewis J. Davis, of Chicago, Ill., recently wrote: "I was a surgeon in the war of the Rebellion and have suffered ever since with chronic diarrhoea and disease of the liver. Whiskey heretofore would not agree with me, but I have no trouble in retaining Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. It also has strengthened and built me up."

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is indorsed by leading clergymen, doctors, educators, nurses, lawyers, as well as business men and women in all walks of life. It is invaluable in the treatment of indigestion, nervous prostration, malaria, chills, low fevers and all diseases of the throat, the bronchial tubes, lungs and stomach. It is a heart tonic, and in old age, when the vital forces are yielding to the weight of years, it will bring strength and vigor to the muscular and nervous centres.

All druggists, grocers, dealers, or direct, $1.00 a large bottle. Be sure you get the genuine; substitutes and imitations are injurious. Medical booklet, containing rare common sense rules for health and testimonials, also doctor's advice, sent free to any one who writes. The Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Double Legal Stamps will go given with every purchase mornings, until 12 o'clock noon, at Wolf's "My Clothier," Corner Hanover and Portland streets. Single stamps thereafter.

SPAIN TAKES OFFENSIVE IN CHURCH CRISIS

MADRID, July 8.—With the presentation to the Cortes, of the bill already signed by King Alfonso, barring new religious orders from the country pending the concordat negotiations, Spain, long the world's foremost Catholic power, to-day challenged the Vatican to a struggle as serious as that which in France led to the expulsion of all religious organizations.

By this step Spain definitely takes the offensive in the negotiations with Rome regarding the concordat. The situation is unprecedented on the Iberian peninsula, for hundreds of years the stronghold of the church. With the King's signature affixed to the bill, the supporters of Premier Canalejas were to-day reinforced by a faction which hitherto has remained neutral in the disputes. The lieutenants of Canalejas, are now confident that the government's program can be carried out in full, even if it is necessary to widen the breach between Madrid and Rome still further.

Though Canalejas's stand has done much to bring about peace in the internal affairs of Spain, following the disorders resulting from the execution of Francisco Ferrer and the resultant riots, the fear is spreading that this decisive lining up of clerical and anti-clerical forces will bring on a new crisis.

Many disorders have already occurred as the result of the government's stand against the religious orders and Canalejas's demand that non-Catholic churches be allowed to display the emblems of their faith.

ARMOR DEFECTS ON BATTLESHIP SLIGHT

WASHINGTON, July 8.—A conference between legal officers of the Navy Department and representatives of the Midvale Steel Company and the New York Shipbuilding Company, has disclosed the fact that a number of slightly defective armor plates were fitted to the Dreadnoughts North Dakota and Utah. The conference concerned the question of who shall pay for the plates. The Government has refused to do so. The plates developed "spalls," or blisters, which are slight defects in no way affecting the fighting efficiency of the vessels. They are always removed in order to insure the integrity of the defensive armor. The sum involved is only a few thousand dollars. The plates on the North Dakota have already been replaced.

EACH SATURDAY OFF AT MacDONNELL'S

MacDonnell's Tremont Temple store will close for the entire day each Saturday during July and August. This action on the part of the MacDonnell management is greatly appreciated by the employees, as a two-days' rest in addition to their regular vacation is something to which they may look forward during the heated term. Customers of MacDonnell's may do their part towards helping carry out this policy by shopping on other days than Saturday during the next two months.

HAS 3 WIVES, SO GETS TWO YEARS IN CELL

Claude L. Ashmore, fifty years old, a painter and decorator, living at No. 142 Chandler street, was to-day confronted by two wives before Judge Parmenter in the Municipal Criminal Court. He was sentenced to spend two years in the House of Correction.

Before the case had gone far it developed that Ashmore has a third wife. She is in a sanitarium in Rhode Island. Two children, resulting from this union, live in Roxbury.

Olive Pierce and Addie Clark, each of whom swore to being Ashmore's wife, scornfully faced the man in court. When the case was called and he was asked what he would plead he said: "Not guilty." When the testimony had all been taken and Judge Parmenter asked him what he had to say then, he said: "It's all true, Your Honor; I'm guilty."

In May, 1901, Ashmore married Isabelle Dea at Newport. They have two children. She is in an asylum now. In 1906 he married Olive Pierce in Newport, and last year he married Addie Clark in this city. He has not been living with his last wife for some time.

The case was started when Policeman Young of station 9, Roxbury, was given a warrant to arrest Ashmore on a charge of not supporting his children. Policeman Young found Ashmore at No. 142 Chandler street and he also found that the man had more than one wife. Policeman Campbell of the East Dedham street station also worked on the case, and they found the three wives, and the bigamy suit resulted.

This is the first time that a bigamy suit was ever tried under the new State law here which permits such an action to be disposed of in municipal courts.

GAYNOR STEPS IN TO SAVE CROKER

NEW YORK, July 8.—Mayor Gaynor has announced that he will look personally into the findings of the committee that has been investigating the conduct of Edward F. Croker, chief of the New York Fire Department, in a recent fire in which two firemen lost their lives. The report of a majority of the committee is said to be hostile to the chief, but the Mayor will rule on the evidence in the report and not on the findings of the committee members.

SONS OF DARTMOUTH BANQUET TO-NIGHT

Sons of Dartmouth, from all sections of Greater Boston, are to have an informal dinner and meeting at the Hotel Bellevue this evening, for the purpose of further discussing and, if possible, perfecting plans for a permanent Dartmouth Club in this city. The committee appointed at a meeting in June will report on a general plan of organization, headquarters and other matters of importance.

RUSH LIQUORS HERE TO BEAT TARIFF

Large consignments of liquors are reaching Boston by various steamers, so as to get in ahead of the new tariff law, which becomes operative August 7, when higher duties will be levied upon all wines and spirits. The Leyland line steamer Philadelphian, from London, brought in 1,250 cases of Geneva and 1,000 cases of gin, besides other fancy liqueurs.

ALBERT G. SHOOK, ACCUSED BY POLICE AS HOTEL "BEAT"

Albert G. Shook, who was arraigned in the Municipal Court to-day on the charge of being a lodging house and hotel "beat" and held in $500 for a hearing on July 14, is said by the police to have defrauded many persons in this city within seven years.

He says he is forty-two years old. He is accused of owing $140 to the Commonwealth Hotel, $38 to Mrs. Catherine Back of No. 69 Hancock street and $13 to Mrs. Mabel A. Haskell of No. 118 Bowdoin street.

Shook often sang in church choirs and was frequently a volunteer at Y. M. C. A. concerts. Recently he was photographed in a long frock coat and posed for the picture with a hand resting on a Bible. Special Officer Patterson arrested Shook yesterday on the complaint of Manager Crafts of the Commonwealth Hotel just as the accused man was about to leave Boston for Providence.

When Shook, who is alleged to have a wife and child in Tennessee, was arraigned to-day the police asked for a continuance of the hearing.

150 FACTORY HANDS FIGHT A HARD FIRE

Fire in the three-story brick building at No. 38 Wareham street, South End, at 9:30 a. m., forced 150 men employed on the upper floors to flee to the street.

Many of them formed a fire brigade and under the direction of Superintendent Ernest Thrasher, manned lines of hose and fought the flames in the lumber drying room of the Perkins Woodworking Company on the first floor.

While engaged in this way John Dacey, a millwright, received slight burns on both arms and was treated at a drug store. The two upper stories of the building are occupied by Phelps & Bradley, furniture manufacturers, and, though the smoke percolated to these floors, the fire itself was confined to the first story. The loss will not exceed $1,000, according to the police. The building is owned by the J. J. McNutt estate.

WADING BOY DROWNS.

LEICESTER, July 8.—Charles, the eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hacker, was drowned while wading in the pond here. The body was recovered.

ST. TERESA'S GARDEN PARTY HELD SATURDAY

The annual garden party of St. Teresa's parish, West Roxbury, which is to be held at the rectory grounds, Centre street, on Saturday, promises to be the largest party yet held by St. Teresa's, judging from the advance sale of tickets.

The pastor, the Rev. John F. Broderick, is in direct charge of all the arrangements, and the various committees under him have been working for the past three weeks to make the affair a success. Father Broderick has introduced several novel attractions for the entertainment of the children, such as automobile and jaunting car rides. There will be field sports in the afternoon under the direction of the Rev. Julian Johnstone, and the list of entries already received is a large one. The games are open to all.

In the evening the grounds will be illuminated by hundreds of electric incandescent and arc lights, and there will be a concert by the Working Boys' Home Band, which will also furnish music for the dancing.

JOHNSON RECEIVES
A ROYAL WELCOME
HOME IN CHICAGO

"LITTLE WANTED ME TO THROW BIG FIGHT TO JIM JEFFRIES" SAYS JOHNSON

CHICAGO, July 8.—The real truth of the split between Jack Johnson, conqueror of Jeffries, and George Little, his erstwhile manager, is out. Johnson says Little told him there would be $100,000 for him if he (Johnson) laid down to the undefeated white champion inside of eight rounds.

This, Johnson says, was Little's first proposition, made about a week before their final break.

In the second discussion of the plan to hippodrome the "fight of the century" a day later Johnson says Little suggested an added inducement in the following language:

"Don't you see, Jack, the pictures will be worth $1,000,000 more if Jeffries wins. Get wise."

"I laughed at him," said Johnson. "I thought he was merely feeling me out.

"The second time he approached me I said: 'See here, George Little, there isn't enough money in the world to make me throw this fight. I think I can whip this man the best day he ever saw, and besides I have too many friends who believe in me and will lose their money to my down.

Jeff Not in Deal.

"Do you believe Jeffries knew anything about the proposed frame-up?" Johnson was asked.

"No, I am sure he did not, because Little went to Jeffries at one time and wanted him to agree to an even split of the $101,000 purse and he refused. He insisted upon the winner receiving 75 per cent. and the loser 25 per cent. Later, as you know, he agreed—reluctantly however—to a 60 and 40 split."

Little's proposal then was the real cause of your dismissing him as your manager?" Johnson was asked.

"Yes, I had been suspicious of him for some time. I don't know who was behind him. Little didn't tell me who had the $100,000. I know this much—the picture men have always been on the square with me and Mr. Rock told me he would just as soon have me win as Jeffries."

Little is on his way home from San Francisco and could not be reached to-day.

Johnson's statement to-day is the first real reason for the split between the big colored fellow and his former manager.

W[illegible] Little presented the situation to Johnson, a wordy war followed in which Jack upbraided Little for ever thinking of such a thing and finally wound up by breaking off all relations with the man who had taken care of his interests since he returned from Australia, where he wrested the title from Tommy Burns.

Johnson said war to the bone followed around the camp, and that he finally had to ask assistance from the authorities to keep Little away from the place. After his dismissal Johnson asserted Little circulated stories about San Francisco that Johnson was not training, that he was sick and in no condition to defend his title against Jeffries.

"When I went West to train for this fight, I told my friends right here in Chicago that I was going to win. Right then and there I made up my mind to train hard and faithfully for what I then believed would be the toughest fight of my career. If condition would land me a winner, I firmly resolved to be in the best shape possible and I did not want anything to happen that would prevent me from being in the pink of condition.

Asked Me to Quit.

"Before we landed on the coast, my dealings with Little always had been pleasant and I never suspected that he was the least bit crooked. Things went along smoothly for awhile and everybody seemed to be enjoying the routine of the training camp. All this time not an incident had happened which marred or hindered my training in the least and I realized by systematic course of training I could get in the best condition of my career.

"Like a clap of thunder out of a clear sky, Little came to me one day and asked, 'Jack, how much will you take to throw the fight?' I asked him what he meant by asking me to throw away the title which I had worked hard for eight years to win and he answered by saying that he had been approached by a person who represented a syndicate which was planning to clean up on the fight. Little further said this person had offered an exorbitant sum if I would lay down.

It took me some seconds to gather my composure for I never thought for an instant that Little would approach me with such a proposition. If I ever called a man in my life, I certainly told Little a few things, and wound up by telling him that I was through with him and that I did not want him round the camp another day.

Forced to Keep Away.

"When I had concluded, he told me it would be impossible for me to dismiss him, that I owed him large sums of money, and if I insisted on it he tried to intimidate me by saying he would let the world know a few things about me. By this he meant that I was not training, that I was not leading a decent life and a lot of other things, which I knew were not true at the time he was telling them to me.

"Well, he refused to leave the camp and said he would stick and collect the money from persons who wished to see me train. In order to avoid trouble, I called upon the authorities for protection, and after they had heard my story Little was compelled to keep away from my camp.

"If you remember, about a day or so later, Little came out with the statement that he would prevent the fight from taking place if I deposed him as my manager. As soon as Promoter Rickard heard of this, he made a hurry-up trip to see me, and I told him the whole story, and then you will remember a story was printed and which was credited to Rickard in which the promoter told Little in so many words to keep his mouth shut or there would be serious trouble, and this trouble would in no sense prevent the fight from taking place.

"This put a quietus on Little, for he well knew we could make a deal more trouble for him than he ever expected. Now, naturally, this trouble put me back in training a bit and took my mind off the fight for a few days, but after Rickard had assured me there would be no further annoyance I settled back to my normal routine of work.

"Since his dismissal I have learned that Little used to open my mail and read all my private correspondence, and after he read the letters he would not have nerve enough to give them to me for fear I would can him. He even sent telegrams to my mother and sisters in Chicago telling them to come to the fight. He sent these wires without my knowledge and consent. In numerous other ways he has crossed me, and I am mighty glad I have found out what kind of a man he is.

"I now hope the public will be assured of the fact that I am an honest fighter. I have worked mighty hard to get to the top, and I am going to stay there as long as hard and honest fighting will keep me in this position. I have been accused of crooked fighting, but I can honestly say that I never went into the ring that I did not do my best fighting."

BIG RECEPTION WAITS JOHNSON IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, July 8.—If the plans of the colored people of this city for the reception to Jack Johnson on his arrival from Chicago on Monday morning are not upset through the police refusing to grant a permit for the big event, the heavyweight champion will receive an ovation when he steps off the train at the Grand Central that will surpass anything of its kind ever extended to a prize fighter in this country.

Ever since the word was flashed from Reno last Monday that Johnson had knocked out Jeffries for the world's championship, every colored man in this vicinity has been urging his friends to get together and give Johnson a great time when he came to New York.

The men of the "black belts" of the city have joined and completed arrangements for a monster parade of automobiles starting from the Grand Central depot and winding up at Baron Wilkins's cafe on West Thirty-fifth street, near Eighth avenue. Wilkins is chairman of the committee. When asked as to the plans of the reception to-day he said:

"We colored people think it is no more than right for us to give Jack a big time when he gets here, and if nothing prevents us from carrying out our plans he will get a reception which the people of New York will never forget. I am going to make application to Mayor Gaynor and Police Commissioner Baker for a permit to allow us to have a parade of automobiles in which Johnson will lead the procession.

"If the permit is granted we will go ahead with our arrangements and charter every automobile we can for the occasion. We expect to have over one hundred automobiles in line, and also two bands of music—the colored vaudeville band and also the new Amsterdam colored band.

"I was talking to Johnson over the long distance telephone in Chicago last night, and he told me he would leave Chicago Sunday afternoon on the twentieth century limited and arrive in New York at 9:30 Monday morning. He said he would have four people with him, but did not say who they would be."

PROMOTERS OF THE FIGHT FILMS WILL GO TO COURTS

NEW YORK, July 8.—"We will fight in the courts for our right to show the moving pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight."

This statement was made to-day by William T. Rock, president of the American Vitagraph Company, on his arrival from Reno with the pictures.

"We want to be as nice as possible about it," he said, "and have no intention of showing where there is any possibility of stirring up race trouble. But while our plans have not been definitely decided upon we will take the matter to the courts. How soon I cannot say now."

Immediately on his arrival at his office, Mr. Rock began a series of conferences with others interested with him in the fight films, which belong to the group of picture interests known as "The Edison licensees." Asked for his opinion of suits which Thomas A. Edison is reported to have brought against his firm to tie up the fight films, Mr. Rock replied that he knew of no such suits.

The pictures arrived here in a special car under the care of J. Stuart Blackton, who took them to Mr. Rock. They were hurried to the firm's laboratory in Brooklyn and the task of preparation began. According to Mr. Rock the first exhibition will be made in New York a week from next Monday.

"I COULD NOT HAVE WHIPPED NEGRO AT MY BEST," SAYS JIM

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—"I never could have whipped Jack Johnson at my best."

This from James J. Jeffries answers the question that has been raised since the former undefeated champion was toppled over by Johnson Monday afternoon at Reno, Nev.

Bruised physically and sore mentally, he made this admission on the dining car of the train which landed him in Oakland. He was sitting with his chin buried in one hand, brooding over his downfall, as he has done since the fight. There was a vacant stare in his eyes, but when a questioner asked: "Was it your age that caused your downfall?" he straightened up for an instant and then answered gloomily:

"I don't know what it was that beat me. I do know, however, that I never could have hit that fellow when I was at my best. I could not have reached him in a thousand years."

LOCAL BIKE RIVALS IN BIG MATCH RACE

Jimmy Moran, the Chelsea milkman, the last of the human pace followers, and Elmer Collins of Lynn, will meet in a special fifteen-mile race behind the motors at the Revere Cycle track next Saturday evening.

Moran is one of the oldest pace followers in the game, and the only one now riding the old tandems. Collins, on the other hand, is a youngster in the game compared to Moran, but a youngster that is capable of giving any man in the game a rub for first money.

Jimmy claims he has regained his old time form and that there is a big surprise in store for Collins and his friends.

In the professional sprint events Kramer will have to travel at his best clip to win from scratch, as some of the best men in the game to-day are out to annex his scalp.

BOSTON SCHOONER IN BIG RACE TO-MORROW

NEW YORK, July 8.—Announcement was made to-day that the Atlantic Yacht Club will start the annual races to Bermuda for sail craft at noon to-morrow. Present indications point to three schooners, one sloop and one yawl being at the starting line.

The schooners are Harold S. Vanderbilt's Vagrant, New York Yacht Club; Shyessa, the property of Demarest Lloyd of Boston, and Captain Fish's Senta, Atlantic Yacht Club. The yawl also is named Vagrant and is the property of Paul C. Lenman of the Portland Yacht Club. The sloop Adyta II., which belongs to R. Von Foregger of the Brooklyn Yacht Club, is the latest craft to enter the contest.

INJURED MEN FIGHT 6 ROUNDS TO DRAW

NEW YORK, July 8.—Happy Davis of Philadelphia, and Young Dixon, both fighting with one hand injured, furnished an uninteresting six-round fight at the Longacre A. C.

DORCHESTER A. A. HYDE PARK MEET

The Dorchester A. A. and the Hyde Park teams will meet at the Stony Brook Reservation, Hyde Park, Saturday afternoon, in a redhot game. This game means much to both teams, for they are tie for third place in the Norfolk County League.

Manager Thomas Devine has a crackerjack team, and he says they are going to land the pennant this year. The Hyde Park boys are certainly putting up a great game of ball for they have been trimming everything right and left. Last Saturday the Quincy team lost a double-header to them, and on the Fourth they trimmed the Readvilles in an eleven-inning game by a score of 4 to 3.

MILLIONAIRE'S SON IS PICKED AS GOOD MAN TO FIGHT JOHNSON

There is a heavyweight boxer in this country whom many expert authorities on boxing figure to have the right to challenge Jack Johnson for the heavyweight honors. He is William Warren Barbour, who on April 12 last won the heavyweight amateur championship at Boston.

This young giant stand six feet two and one-half inches and weighs 204 pounds stripped to fighting togs. His few performances in the roped arena stamp him as a worthy opponent for any man his weight, and such good judges of fighters as Charley White, Jim Corbett and Jim Jeffries figure him to have a chance with the best of his class.

Colonel William Barbour, millionaire thread manufacturer, father of the amateur champion, who takes a keen interest in the art of self-defense, is not enthusiastic about his son entering the professional ranks of pugilism. Mr. Barbour saw his boy win the amateur title, and said after the performance that it was the first and last time that young William would appear before the public in the ring.

Barbour Big and Game.

Jack Johnson stands alone in his class, and as there is a dearth of white men in the ring to-day, young Barbour might be induced to continue his career in the ring and defend the white race for individual supremacy.

Comparing Johnson and Barbour in size, the latter is an inch and a quarter taller than the champion, and at fighting weight would weigh about the same as Johnson did in his bout with Jeffries, 208 pounds.

He is game without question, as his former instructors, Jack Cooper and Jack Doyle will vouch for. They were the two men who first gave Barbour instructions in boxing, and developed and trained him for his bouts in Boston when he won the championship.

While training in a New York gymnasium last Spring Barbour asked to have some big man his own size swap punches with him, and Jim Corbett was brought in to try him out. Corbett went in from his country home and put on the gloves with Barbour. Having heard that the new aspirant for heavyweight honors was somewhat of a puncher, Jim was cautious at the start, and before they had gone a full round the ex-champion found that he was up against a man who could handle himself equally as well as any amateur heavyweight he ever tackled.

Jeff Sparred with Barbour.

Young Barbour's reputation spread far beyond the walls of the gymnasium, where he still continued to take his daily workouts. When Jeffries landed in New York from his trip to Europe he wanted to loosen himself up in preparation for a long theatrical tour.

He selected the same place where Barbour was doing daily stunts with the gloves, and naturally enough Jim was asked to take on the newcomer for a friendly bout. He did, and after they had been working on the mat and tossing the medicine ball around for a few days, Jeff invited Barbour to join his training camp in California.

Having heard so much about Barbour, Charley White dropped into the gymnasium one day to see him work. At first Charley would not believe that Barbour was not boxing for a living, his finished style, foot work and ability to take a good punch and deliver one leading him to believe Barbour to be a professional.

It was a year later that Barbour decided to box publicly and take a chance at the amateur bouts in this city. Charley White was engaged to handle Barbour, and when the time came great preparations were made for the occasion. Hundreds of New York friends of Barbour made the trip to see their idol in his debut in the ring.

On the first night of the show Barbour sat at the ringside and saw Joe Burke knock out Emory Payne of New York, and Kendal Salisbury win over J. R. Day, a famous Toronto heavyweight, the latter taking an awful beating. On the second night Barbour was called on to face Salisbury. The B. A. A. Club House was jammed to the doors to see the young millionaire perform.

Barbour's Real Test.

Following the instructions of Charley White, Barbour started to box his man at long range, and succeeded in scoring with such ease that he had little trouble gaining the decision. Salisbury was credited with having hit Barbour three light taps.

Then came the real test. Barbour was given fifteen minutes' rest, and Joe Burke was trotted out to battle for the title, he being the runner up. The bell rang, and Barbour and Burke were at it. Barbour immediately began to outbox the rugged Irishman, but had to bring all his cleverness into play to keep from getting a wicked swing on the jaw.

Barbour had the better of the round; but the next was not so easy. They sparred for a minute, when Burke started a rush and swung wildly for the head. He nailed Barbour flush on the jaw, and the latter staggered and his knees caved in. He reached out and grabbed Burke, pulling him to the floor with him. By the time they were in fighting position again Barbour's head had cleared, and from then on it was Barbour all the way.

Puts His Man Out.

It was not long after the third round had opened when Burke hit the mat from a left hook on the jaw. Barbour was cool and kept his head, while Burke was wild in his delivery. When the latter got up, Barbour rushed him to the ropes, sending in rights and lefts to the head, and finally sent his man to the carpet for the full count with a well directed right hook on the chin.

In that fight Barbour showed without a doubt that he is possessed of great gameness and is a master in blocking and delivering blows.

He is a well developed youth, and has just passed his twenty-first birthday. From the opinions of those who know the real fighting qualities of Barbour it can be said that, barring Johnson, there are few his equal with the gloves.

CHANCE WHIPS MAN WHO INSULTS WOMAN

CHICAGO, July 8.—Manager Frank Chance of the Chicago National League Baseball Club last night thrashed a passenger on the train carrying the Cub team from Pittsburg to Chicago.

The scene of the combat took place at one end of the car shortly before the train pulled into Cleveland at 10:30. Manager Chance's antagonist declined to give his real name. The conductor and porter were not present when the conflict was in action. When they learned of it they immediately investigated and put the man off at Cleveland. He was glad to get off, too, as the entire team gathered around him and all were ready to deliver punches. Manager Chance declared the man had had sufficient and ordered the players not to touch him.

The trouble started when Mrs. James Archer, wife of the Cub catcher, declared the man had insulted her, and told Mrs. Chance. She in turn apprised the manager. Chance ran to the berth and struck the man in the face. The latter dressed and when he came out Chance tweaked his nose and hit him until he surrendered.

BIG INTER-CITY HORSE MATINEE

Judging from the list of horses that have been matched in the ten races that are carded for the opening meeting of the series of matinees between the Lynn, Quannapowitt, Dorchester, Metropolitan and Fellsway Driving clubs, to be held at Combination Park, Medford, to-morrow the best sport that has ever been put on the boards by the amateur horses is to be expected. In each of the events each of the clubs will be represented by one horse.

It is evident that all of the clubs have made a thorough canvass to get the best horses possible, and the fifty nags that are named represent the pick of the fun horses in the vicinity of Boston.

A glance through the list of classes would indicate that the Lynn representative succeeded in getting the horses representing his club advantageously placed, but there are a number of classes in which the Lynn horsemen look to have their work cut out for them.

The fast trotting class, in which the Lynn Club is represented by The Sailorman, the Quannapowitt Club by Crown Prince, the Metropolitan Club by Victor C., the Dorchester Club by Carl C., and the Fellsway lub by Fred C., should be a corking contest.

Ther is much interest in this race because of the fact that the grey gelding Victor C., which a syndicate of Metropolitan Driving Club members purchased with the belief that he could clean up in the fast trotting events right through the series of races, will make his first start for his new owners in this event.

The committee in charge of the series are determined to get the races started in good time and keep things moving. It is to be hoped that they will, as if the races are dragged out to the extent that marked the races at Combination Park on the Fourth, the public is bound to become disgusted.

PAGE CLASS TEAM BASEBALL DATES

On next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Dunbar avenue grounds, Dorchester, the Page Class play the Pilgrim Class for the first time this season in the Greater Boston League series. Both teams are near the top in the league standing and an interesting game is expected.

Saturday, the 16th, the Page Class team plays a charity game at Gloucester. The players will be the guests of C. H. Burnham, Jr., of State street, who will entertain them at his Summer residence at Bass Rocks, where a first-class shore dinner will be served the players. After dinner the boys will play the game, and after a swim in the ocean they will be given a ride around Cape Ann.

"Chet" Snow, the Page Class star pitcher, and Frank Drake, the heavy-hitting infielder of the team, injured themselves last week, which will keep them out of the line-up for some time. The former sprained a ligament of his leg and the latter had one of his finger nails torn off.

CORINTHIAN MARKS 25TH ANNIVERSARY

The twenty-fifth anivrersary of the Corinthian Yacht Club was observed last night at the clubhouse, Marblehead. About 200 members and guests were present at the dinner, at which Commodore H. H. Walker presided. Commodore Walker, ex-Commodore H. A. Morss and W. C. Joyce spoke briefly on the history of the organization, and W. L. Carlton, secretary of the regatta committee, gave an account of some of the important racing events. A salute of twenty-five guns from the rocks in front of the clubhouse and an entertainment were features of the occasion.

STRAIGHT TIPS
FOR SPORT FANS

OH, YOU SEA NYMPHS. NOW ELSIE Ackeroyd, the fair East Boston speed killer in the briny, wishes to announce that she is the champion long distance swimmer around Boston and is ready to back up her statement, having won a silver cup which proves it. Elsie is to take a little exercise spin of several miles along the Revere Beach on Sunday in preparation for some bigger events later on.

WHO WILL BE JACK JOHNSON'S next opponent? Why, Old Father Time looks like the fellow now. Jack's desire to be a second Barney Oldfield in the auto racing game is well known and it is his ambition to go faster in a chug chug machine than any man, black or white, ever travelled. Nobody ever beat Father Time yet, so that is where the colored champion may get his knockout.

JERRY CALLAHAN JUST BROKE EVEN on the fight. He had the right dope on the big match, but somebody handed him the wrong kind in a little deal for several boxes of cigars that were smuggled (?) in at a ridiculously low price and Jerry bit. They made fine hay and sawdust is the way Jerry puts it.

Straight Tips—A bets B that Frank Schulte of the Cubs did not bat .250 the past two seasons. Did he. E. P. W.

Schulte's average for 1909 was .264; for 1908 it was .236. This year he is batting around the .250 mark.

Straight Tips—Do decide an argument. Is "Peaches" Graham batting better this year than last. L. O. B.

Yes. He is hitting consistently above .300 this year. Last year his average was .239.

Straight Tips—Please publish in your column that Mike Mahoney of Charlestown is open to meet any 105-110-pound boy in the State. He has beaten all the 105-pound boys in the amateurs He is a good, stiff puncher with either hand. He has fought at the Armory, Riversides and B. A. A. Mike Brown of Malden, or any of them are all the same to him. MICHAEL O'CONNELL.

Straight Tips: Presuming that your natural modesty causes you to refrain from saying "I told you so," permit me to say for you that away back months ago you informed your readers that you thought the chances were all in favor of Johnson beating Jeffries, providing everything was straight.

In the midst of the hysterical clamor now going on about preventing the moving pictures of the fight—some of it coming from certain well-meaning people—is it not well to remind these people that others have rights as well as they? There is altogether too much attempted regulation of other people's affairs going on at present, and I venture to assert that some of us consider our judgment about what we wish to see as good as that of people who never saw a boxing match. From all I can make out the fight was not brutal, and, moreover, must have been very tame indeed almost all the way. Probably more actual damage is done in many three-round amateur bouts about which nothing is said.

So far as rioting is concerned, if the authorities would sternly suppress the first man who started anything there would be little heard of it. Yours truly,
W. H. CAULFIELD.
No. 19 Temple street, Boston.

As long as the laws permit boxing—and that ought to be forever—I can't see myself why moving pictures of such a fight as the Jeffries-Johnson argument should be barred anywhere. With due respect to the motives of those who object to them, I think they are silly and that they object to the pictures for want of something better to bother their minds with—the same cause that makes a gossip chatter. The Jeffries-Johnson scrap turned out to be a boxing match pure and simple—nothing brutal. Each got a bloody nose and what kid doesn't get one of those about once a month or oftener? Didn't you?

Straight Tips: Please, to decide a bet, tell me if F. Gotch, the champion wrestler, was ever thrown by Zybisco, the Greek wrestler. When, and in how minutes and seconds! I. N. B.

Gotch threw the Greek easily in straight fall. You spell the Greek's name wrong, but who cares?

Horse Notes and Speedway

John M. Hall's stallion Foros, by Bingen, 2:06¼, out of Nelly McGregor, 2:14, has been sent to Henry Titer at the Readville track to be put in shape to make a fast record. Foros is a brother to the noted stallion Blue Hill, now owned in Russia, that it will be remembered drove General Watts out in the race at Readville in which the son of Axworthy trotted two heats, each in 2:09¼.

* * *

Hugh Milam's three-year-old pacing colt by Directum Miller, 2:05¼, dam Regant's Last, dam of Reproachless, 2:04½, stepped a mile in 2:15 at Readville, the last half in 1:06. He looks like a very high class racing proposition.

* * *

Five of the two-year-olds in John Young's stable at the Readville track have trotted quarters in 33½ seconds or better. Young is giving the youngsters in his stable a two weeks' let up from fast miles, but has been letting them step at the end of the mile.

* * *

Billy O'Neill, who has been training a stable at the Lexington track, has a strong stable for the half-mile track meetings. Billy was very well pleased with the good race that Frank Robbins's little Kremlin trotter Kaldar, 2:22¾, trotted at Hillsgrove.

* * *

Many of the horsemen who raced at Hillsgrove do not like the plan of limiting the races to five heats. This is particularly true of those who had a ticket on Louis Tewhart's mare Rebecca G.

* * *

Joseph Bolduc of New Bedford has entered the bay gelding Prince Henry Westland, 2:21¼, by Westland—Kitty Patchen by Victor Patchen, in the Grand Circuit American Derby trot, to be held at Readville.

* * *

Word has been received that Taunton racing men have organized a driving club and that they are anxious to mix things with Brockton in an intercity meet. Joel A. Thayer perfected the organization and was elected president. J. L. Adams is vice president, Frank W. Perry, secretary, and Dr. C. R. Borden, treasurer. It was voted to make Augustine C. Dore, veteran reinsman and trainer, an honorary member. The fair ground track will be put into condition for the races and New Bedford Driving Club members have already asked for a meet.

* * *

Among several high class young trotters which Abe Johnson is working at the Brockton Fair track is Cochino, a two-year-old black colt, by Cochato, 2:11¼. His dam was Yacatala, the mare which Walter Cox campaigned last year. Cochino, as evidence of his inherent speed ability, trotted an eighth in 22 seconds. He is being brought along carefully and will be prepared for his $70,000 worth of stake engagements.

YALE RECEIPTS DROP $6,000

NEW HAVEN, Ct. July 8.—The annual report from the four major sports at Yale for the year 1908-09, ending Sept. 1, 1909, shows total receipts of $104,945, a decrease of $6,041, as compared with the previous year.

Track athletics brought in $3,811, an increase of $1,397; baseball brought in $28,484, a decrease of $4,677; boating $4,279, a decrease of $310, and football $68,370, a decrease of $4,171.

The total expenses were for track athletics $13,369, an increase of $290; baseball $22,787, a decrease of $6,254; boating $19,813, an increase of $776; and football $37,846, a decrease of $8,888. Including in expenses $600 for minor athletics, and $5,000 for the Carnegie swimming pool, the balance of profit from athletics was $4,331 as compared with $906 the preceding year.

The reserve fund of the financial union falls to $116,852, as compared with $119,831 the previous year, due chiefly to purchase of real estate for $9,380, and boathouse funds, amounting to $4,183, transferred to the University.

In some of the larger items of expense, track athletics, hotels and meals rise from $1,300 to $1,806 and training table from $1,719 to $2,399. In baseball, travelling expenses rise from $2,110 to $2,404; hotels and meals rise from $2,876 to $3,685, while training table falls from $2,194 to $937.

In football, travelling expenses fall from $2,110 to $1,127; hotels and meals rise from $2,876 to $3,561, and training table falls from $2,194 to $1,401. In boating, hotels and meals rise from $230 to $967 and training falls from $2,488 to $976. The doctors' medicine bill of the football team rises from $888 to $1,258.

In football the receipts from the Princeton game were $25,342 and from the Harvard game $37,420. In baseball, Yale received from the Princeton games $11,263 and from the Harvard games $8,833.

Before and After the Game

By DYKE CLARK

Muggsy McGraw foiled. The wisest old fox on the diamond fooled by the Doves. That's about the size of it. He was simply bamboozled into losing the double-header yesterday, which wound up the series between the Giants and the Doves. Final result of same series: Doves 3, Giants 1. Pretty good work for the tail-enders fighting the contenders for first place.

But the joke on Muggsy. It happened this way. Both managers agreed to close the doubleheader at 6.25 o'clock that the teams might catch a train an hour later for the West. It was ten minutes before the closing time. The Giants were piling up run after run and snatching a supposed victory out of defeat as Ferguson and Mattern, who relieved him in the memorable eighth inning, passed batter after batter along to first base and the Giants chalked up six runs. There remained less than five minutes to play, when the slaughter was over, and the Giants were gloating over the discomfort of the Doves and the fans as well.

Beck was the first up for the Doves. "Foul them off," yelled Manager Lake, and the big slugger did it to the Queen's taste, turning every ball into foul territory. Umpire Johnson, watch in hand, turned to the stand and yelled "Game called." Then McGraw, realizing what a neat trick had been turned against himself, was full of wrath. He rushed across the field to tear the umpire limb from limb, but the fans rolling into the diamond decided him otherwise. The game reverted back to even innings, according to rule, and the six runs that the Giants made were simply wasted, and the Doves won, 5 to 2, as the score stood at the end of the seventh interval.

It was bitter medicine for McGraw to swallow. Snodgrass, his chief comedian, did all the clownish acts he knew on the coaching lines while the Giants made runs. By the way, its about all the value that player is to McGraw, as he made the poorest showing of any of his team at the bat, and that last inning became half a burlesque show, as Snodgrass got by with a lot of kid tricks that wouldn't have been tolerated on a college ball field, where things usually bubble over from exuberance.

The first bunch of gloom for the Giants was due to the Doves connecting with their pet twirler, Drucke, in the first game, who proved an easy duck for the home club swingers. In the second round a triple, two doubles and a single announced that it was about time Mr. Drucke disappeared, if he was to be saved for some other occasion. All the aforesaid hits resulted in five runs for the Doves, and then McGraw woke up and chased Drucke to the stables, calling on Otie Crandall, one of his steadiest, and he was all to the good, as not another tally did the Doves get after that second inning. Curtis, who started to pitch, was yanked out in one inning, as the Giants threatened to kill him, when he didn't insist on issuing a string of passes. Evans, who substituted, went along fairly well, but the Giants were creeping up, and it looked so dangerous that Sammie Frock was sent for, pitching the last three innings without a quiver, and the Doves romped home in the lead by a narrow margin.

The Doves chased the renowned Bugs Raymond to the tall timbers in the second game, while the contest was in the third inning, but they had acquired five runs by that time, which looked good enough to win, and so proved. Leon Ames, about the best next to Mathewson that McGraw has on the bench, replaced Bugs, and he certainly pitched some ball, as he held the Doves at bay for the rest of the game.

It was some field day for Freddie Beck. What he did to the ball was a shame. Six times he came up to bat. A triple, two doubles and single was what execution he did with the wand, about the classiest bingling of the double bill.

The sport had hardly started when Arlie Latham, McGraw's first assistant circus performer, was canned by the umpire, together with Red Murray, for too much vocal remonstrance to a decision rendered by Umpire Moran. They not only got a call, but it was banishment from the field for the culprits, and Murray was not allowed to enter the second game, though he and McGraw pleaded to no purpose.

BOSTON AMERICAN'S DOUBLE

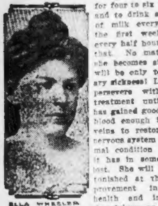
For the Nervous, Emotional Woman

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

WHAT counsel could you offer to one who is affected more by the emotional side of life than by the sensible; who can be reached through her sentimental nature sooner than by her reasoning power? She is easily moved to tears and is easily hurt and offended.

I would advise this woman to give up eating all solid foods for four to six weeks, and to drink a glass of milk every hour the first week and every half hour after that. No matter if she becomes sick—it will be only temporary sickness! Let her persevere with the treatment until she has gained good, rich blood enough in her veins to restore the nervous system a normal condition which it has in some way lost. She will be astonished at the improvement in her health and in her cheerfulness and good nature, once she has the will power to continue the milk diet for six weeks.



ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

After that time she can resume an ordinary diet, but she will be better in health by taking only two meals a day.

Then she must begin a course of mental gymnastics, and reason with herself and control her moods, as she would use a check rein upon an unbroken and restless horse if she were driving. Quiet words and gentle assertions to the animal that there is nothing to fear in his path help him to mind the reins. Just so quiet assertions that there is nothing to fear, that all is peace, love and harmony, will help this woman to calm her excited nerves and to overcome her weak tendency to tears and resentment.

The Help of Meditation

An hour given to self-analysis and meditation each day will help her to realize how unbecoming her moods and tantrums are, and how unlovable she makes herself, and what a crime she commits in destroying the comfort of her family and associates.

One might as well try to find sleep upon a bed of thorns as happiness in the house with a woman who is "easily hurt" and "over-sensitive." To be over-sensitive means to be wholly bound up in one's self.

The woman who thinks more of the comfort and happiness of others than of herself has little time to be "easily wounded." By comfort I do not mean the physical comforts of an orderly house and a well-cooked meal. That is only a part of the comforts of life—the mental and spiritual conditions are of far greater importance. We can find order and good food at hotels and restaurants, but we cannot find love and cheer and peace and harmony with loved ones unless our loved ones help us. The sensitive, weeping, hysterical and unreasonable woman wants to remember these facts.

But the man who lives with such a nature does not want to aggravate it by thoughtless and inconsiderate actions, or wound it by neglect and indifference. He wants to use love and kindness and patience, and do his best to develop the reasoning powers at the same time.

Make Her Understand

Approach such a woman first through her sentimental nature—make her understand that she is unlovable and that her moods spoil her attraction for men. Then reason with her.

A young girl was handsomely supported by her uncle. Speaking of his kindness a married friend said to her one day: "I hope you tell him often how you appreciate what he is doing for you. If you give him a little caress and a word of thanks every day or two he will feel the investment is paying good dividends."

"But I am not demonstrative, and I cannot act a part," the girl replied. "I cannot act affectionately unless the mood is on me. I inherit that peculiarity and cannot change my nature."

The girl's reasoning was all wrong. She really did appreciate what her uncle was doing for her, and her habit of undemonstrativeness was not natural, but the result of her early environment. She had been reared by parents who commanded obedience, and regarded duty as the governing law, and who left the affectional side of the girl's nature repressed and stunted. No spontaneous expressions of love were ever indulged in by the members of her family, and she imagined her misfortune to be her inheritance. But, even if such an inheritance is given a woman, the first effort of her life should be to overcome it.

Men Like Appreciation

There is not a man on earth who does not like and appreciate a spontaneous word and act of affection now and then from the mother, sister, daughter, wife or other associate who is receiving his care and support. No matter if he acts embarrassed and ill at ease, or makes a tactless jest of it, or seems a little gruff and says, "What are you after now with all this taffy?" yet in the secret heart of him he is pleased and gratified.

Men have very soft hearts at the core. They are frequently crusted over with a tough outside, and many a man makes it the work of a lifetime to convince the world that he is cold and opposed to all sentiment, when the fact is he is quite the opposite.

The early Puritanical training of our country was a disaster to the race. The repression of natural, affectional impulse, the cold and austere deportment of members of the family toward one another, have served to fill insane asylums and destroy the home life of thousands of the descendants of those rigidly moral old ancestors of ours. It is a terible misfortune for any young boy or girl to be reared in such an atmosphere. If it has been your lot, do not imagine it is your nature. If it is your nature go to work and change it.

Speak the words of gratitude and affection you feel, and force your stiffened heart to limber up enough to bestow a tender little caress upon the persons nearest to you. Learn the calisthenics of love—and practice them. It will make you a better man or woman, and do more for your home life than cold, loveless duty and dollars can ever do.

The Way to Do It

By WINIFRED BLACK

THE parents of a certain American city are pleading with the Board of Aldermen to bar moving picture shows from the residence districts.

There is nothing harmful in the pictures themselves, say the parents, but they don't want the children to get the habit.

One mother went before the Board of Aldermen and declared that she didn't have money enough to pay her rent this month because the children kept her poor getting nickels to go to the picture shows.

That's an excellent idea, isn't it? I wonder some one didn't think of it years ago.

Why didn't they root up all the orchards in the neighborhood when I was little and lived in the country?

I wouldn't have had half so many attacks of sudden illness, the family doctor bill would have been much smaller, and the man who owned the orchard would have had a good many more apples at the end of the season.

What a simple proposition it all is, when you come down to the real rights of it.

If your child makes himself ill on chocolates, don't make him stop eating chocolate. Go down to the Board of Aldermen and ge them to shut up all the candy shops.

If your boy steals from his employer to attend the races, don't have the boy sent to jail. Shut up the race track.

If your girl runs away with a fascinating young evangelist, don't let her take her own punishment for what she has done. Get a law passed abolishing evangelists.

That's the way to do the thing.

Don't teach your children that they must pay for their own mistakes. Don't let them think for a minute that you expect them to have common sense or common honesty, or common self control. Just make the other fellow pay for it—and pass a law.

Isn't it simple?

Love and I

By J. LEWIS MILLIGAN.

LOVE clasp'd me with a swift embrace,
And look'd me closely in the eyes,
Pour'd kisses on my blushing face,
Ere I could question if 'twere wise.

She held my ear with silv'ry song,
And charm'd to ecstasy my shame;
All words were music on her tongue,
But golden music was my name.

Then hand in hand did Love and I
Roam through the dewy meads of morn,
Wearing the rose of chastity—
The lily rose that has no thorn.

She led me to her palace grand,
And there we lived a purple noon;
She laid her wealth at my command,
Nor lack'd my heart life's sweetest boon.

But Love grew sad at set of sun,
And doff'd her rich embroider'd vest,
Put on the garment of a nun,
And cross'd her hands upon her breast.

Freckles

A Simple, Sure, Quick, Safe Treatment That Removes Them Like Magic

Spring winds and sunshine are busy now bringing out a big crop of ugly, hideous, humiliating freckles, but these blemishes have no terrors for those who have learned that Kintho banishes them utterly. Look in the glass and at the first sign of a freckle go to Houghton & Dutton Co., Jordan Marsh Co., or Riker Jaynes Drug Co., and get a two-ounce package of Kintho (K-i-n-t-h-o), and if it doesn't do all we claim get your money back.

LADY WALPOLE POPULAR.

LADY DOROTHY WALPOLE, daughter of Lord Orford, is a descendant of the famous Sir Robert Walpole, who was Prime Minister of England in the early part of the eighteenth century. She is said to have inherited many qualities that were characteristic of her eminent ancestor. She has a remarkably keen mind, a ready wit and much tact. She has been a popular figure in London society for three years and is marked for her grace and her cleverness in conversation. Her mother, Lady Orford, was Louise Corbin of New York. Lord and Lady Orford do not frequent London, preferring their charming country seat at Wolterton Park, Norwich, England, to the crush and activity of London society.

The Silly Season

By Dorothy Dix

THE silly season is upon us now, when the general public seems to entertain a fatuous belief that the Recording Angel knocks off work and shuts up his books, and when one may do with impunity the thing that would shock one half to death to even think about doing at any other time of the year.

HOWS THAT!
GREAT!! HOLD STILL NOW!!!
HARRY LEWIS

"Don't be silly enough to allow the ever-present idiot with the camera to snapshot you in an affectionate attitude."

Why people's morality and sense of propriety should melt down into a mush in August, instead of rearing itself into an adamantine column as it does in December, nobody knows. Suffice it to say that it does. We behold modest matrons that would blush if anybody saw the tie of their toe peering from under their Winter skirts calmly parading along the beach in Summer in a ballet costume that displays their curves to all.

Devoted wives, who are the very pinks of propriety in Winter, indulge in Summer flirtations that would land them in the divorce courts if their husbands knew of them; and even conventional people, who demand the grip and the passwords of society from all they meet in the Winter, pick up chance acquaintances in Summer without even so much as asking their names.

Probably men are just as silly in the Summer as women are, and do just as many foolish things, but because the consequences of a woman's folly are so much more serious to her than a man's is to him, I am minded to make a plea to my sisters to at least try to be as little silly as they can through the dog days.

Because it is Summer, and most of the bars are down, girls, don't let men treat you with a familiarity that you wouldn't stand for at any other time of the year. Don't forget that reputations spoil more quickly in hot weather than at any other time, and that when you leave the seashore or the mountains you don't leave the report of your indiscretions behind you. Don't come home with any mud on your skirts, metaphorically or actually.

Because you happen to be on the seashore or in a camping party, don't be silly enough to let any young man lie around with his head in your lap, or for you to sit up with his arm about you. Because it is Summer doesn't alter the fact of his being a man or you a woman, or of any of the relationships of life, nor make it one whit less vulgar and dangerous.

Because it is Summer, don't be silly enough to let the idiot with the camera snapshot you in an affectionate attitude with some young man. It may seem awfully funny at the time, and be perfectly innocent, but just reflect how that picture will look on some young man's wall next Winter. It don't appeal to your sense of humor, then. It will rouse bitter shame in you.

Because it is Summer, don't be silly enough to get into a flirtation with some good looking man that you meet on the train or a boat. He may be all right, and again he may not, but at any rate you will have cheapened yourself in his eyes. Just remember that it doesn't take much handling to rub the bloom off a peach in July or August.

Beware of the Moonlight

Because it is Summer, and you are staying at some romantic spot and it happens to be moonlight, don't be silly enough to engage yourself to some man of whom you know nothing. There are all kinds of adventurers about, on the lookout for just such foolish little girls as you are, and many a tragedy, that wrecks a woman's life, begins at a Summer resort. If a man tells you that he loves you, just tell him to wait, and come back and tell you that over again when the cold, hard, practical Winter has set in, and that you will give him your ansewr then—when papa has taken his Bertillion measurements, and gotten his pedigree, and his rating from Bradstreet's.

Because it is Summer, and his wife is away, don't be silly enough to get into any entanglement with a married man. Suppose he is lonesome. You don't hold the office of Public Comforter. Suppose he does want to take you about the roof gardens, and outdoor restaurants and to ride in his automobile. You can buy pleasure too high, little girl, and it is better to stay at home and eat a stuffy dinner in a stuffy flat than it is to have that sinking feeling in your heart when the man's wife comes home in the Fall and to know that the people are gossiping about you behind your back.

Because it is Summer, Mrs. Married Woman, and you are off at a Summer resort, don't get gay and giddy, and amuse yourself by trying to cut the girls out of the few beaus. It may be a temptation just to see whether or not you have lost your rabbit's foot as a charmer. It may be—nay it is—actually thrilling to have a man tell you again that you are the most beautiful and fascinating creature on earth,

WILT THOU BE MINE?
I WILT. (WHAT IS YOUR FULL NAME PLEASE?)
HARRY LEWIS

"Don't be silly enough, just because it is Summer, to engage yourself to some man of whom you know nothing."

and to have one more nibble at the sweetmeats of romance, but you know what the old scandal mongers who form the rocking chair brigade on the gallery of a Summer hotel say about a married woman who flirts.

Therefore, don't be silly enough to buy a few days' diversion at a price that may cost you your character, and your husband's faith in your loyalty.

'Mrs. Married Woman,' Read This

Also, Mrs. Married Woman, don't be silly enough to go off and spend three or four months in the Summer, placidly enjoying yourself under the impression that your husband is sitting up at home, alone in his dreary flat, holding your photograph in his hand, and counting the days until you come back. He isn't employed in that manner. Far from it. When the cat is away the mice will play, and if there is one time in the world that it is expedient for a wife to look after her fences it is in the good old Summer time.

Go away and have a little change, and give your husband a rest from your society, but don't stay too long. That is, if you don't want to find a husband whose affections have been purloined in your absence.

Above all, mothers, because it is the Summer time, when we all feel like taking things easy, don't relax your watchfulness over your girls. Don't let them go off unchaperoned on excursions with young men. Don't let them spoon on park benches. Don't let them go to Summer resorts unless you can go along also. They are young and inexperienced, and the call of love and life is peculiarly potent when the blood is warmed by the sun, and the easy familiarity, of the Summer makes a toboggan slide down which many a good but foolish young girl has gone to her ruin.

Just remember that, and it may save you some bitter regrets later on.

Don't add to the silly season your own criminal foolishness.

HAIL, Higher Education! What a glorious thing to be
An erudite professor in a Universitee!
In language pure and undefiled to get the sudden sack
And have the language at command with which to come right back.
Poor Jeff and Johnson have but fists with which to jolt and jab,
They wouldn't last an eye-wink in a championship of gab.

When Doctor Blinks of Tumbia thinks Professor Quart too rash
In writing notes to ladies of the species known as mash,
He pens a thousand lines or two with diction circumspect
Which say, "You're bounced" (or larger words, but all to that effect).
The said professor drops a note addressed "Sweet Honey Bunch,"
As on his mental plexus lands a virile verbal punch.
He lays aside his tender thoughts, shuts up his tattered Horace,
Swings his revolving bookcase round and draws a large thesaurus,
And then in deftly chosen words, which bite and sting and cut,
He calls the doc a dub, a fake, a dead one and a mutt.
Not in the words that we have used, ah, no! in language fraught
With all the bitter venom of the higher plane of thought!

Hail, Higher Education! In a brighter, happier day
No pugs will meet at Reno in a vulgar fistic fray,
But in a laurel-covered ring two cultivated gents
Will parry phrases, epigrams and quips replete with sound and sense.
And he will vanquish who can use most polished and ornate
Scholastic and pedantic line of good old Billingsgate!

The Disillusionment of the Honeymoon

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

The Twentieth Day

THEY had not been expected back until the first of the month, so they found their apartment still in the hands of the painter and paperhanger.

Helen wanted to go to a hotel, but Warren's people insisted that they stay with them. She tried to explain to him that while she would be glad to visit his family later, as they had planned—that just now she would rather not, that it would be most embarrassing for her and an inconvenience to his mother, who had not expected them so soon.

But he swept aside all her objections.

"Nonsense, we will be much more comfortable at mother's than at any hotel. And why go to the needless expense of a hotel when they want us to come? Besides now they would be offended if we didn't."

The reference to the expense hurt her more than anything else. While in almost every way she was more economical than he, this was still their honeymoon, and she shrank from the thought that he should argue the saving of a hotel bill against her preference at this time. Their arrival at his home was most awkward. The day before Edith, his younger sister, home from boarding school on her Summer vacation, had fallen from a stepladder while trying to drape her school colors above her dresser.

Their Arrival at His Home

And when Warren and Helen arrived it was to find the whole family much concerned and disturbed over her sprained ankle and arm. She had ben brought down to the guest's room on the second floor, and they had to take her room on the floor above.

They were received very hurriedly and informally, and left to look after themselves. Edith's room had not been even prepared for them. Everything was just as she had left it.

"Oh, Warren, we shouldn't have come here now! Can't you see how awkward and inconvenient it is? Let us go to a hotel—a boarding house even."

"Now, don't be foolish. Things are a little upset over Edith, of course. But we'll be here only a few days—our apartment will be ready next week. I'll go down and tell mother to send the maid to fix up this room. At any rate we'll be a lot more comfortable here than at a hotel."

"Oh, it isn't just the room or being comfortable! It's my coming here in this way as a bride—oh, Warren, can't you understand?"

"Well, how did you want to come? With a brass band and a flourish of trumpets and the family lined up in full dress to receive you?"

She drew back with a flush. "Warren, do you LIKE to hurt me? Is that why you do it so often?"

"It seems to me you're pretty easily hurt—and what's more, you're unreasonable. Here I bring you to my people for a few days while our apartment is being finished, and you are at once dissatisfied and want to go off to some hotel. If you begin by being as hard to please as that—I can see——"

"Warren, don't—please don't! You are saying harder things to me each day."

"Then don't give me occasion to! Stop being so exacting and unreasonable."

After his almost constant complaints and dissatisfaction all during their trip—the injustice of this sent a quick retort to her lips, but she forced it back. She was learning not to say things.

"I'll go down now and send up the maid. And you'd better get ready for dinner—Father never likes any one to be late."

She motioned toward the suit cases. "You'll have to open those first, so I can get out my things."

He opened the suit case and unstrapped the steamer trunk. When he had gone she knelt by the trunk and took out her prettiest gown. She dreaded this first dinner with his family more than she had ever dreaded anything before. Instinctively she felt she must look her best. The assurance of being well and becomingly dressed would help her, her feminine intuition told her that.

Her First Dinner With Them

While his mother had invited her to luncheon several times before their marriage, all of his family still seemed very much like strangers. And this was her first appearance among them as his bride. That it should be at this time, when they were not expecting her and when the house was upset by an accident, she knew was to her disadvantage. But she must make the best of it—for she wanted them to like her.

The maid came to put in order the room, and just in time to hook up her dress. A few moments later Warren appeared.

"My, but we look stunning to-night!" his recent displeasure forgotten in the bright vision before him.

"Oh, do I?" eagerly, as she ran toward him.

"Well, I should say so," returning her kiss. "That's a gown I haven't seen."

"Yes I know—I wanted to look my best to-night. Oh, Warren, I do so want your people to like me."

"Why, of course they'll like you. Now come on—they're all waiting."

And with her heart beating fast she went down to her first dinner with his people. What would it be like? Much of her future comfort and happiness she felt depended upon this first evening at his home.

CHEESE KEPT FOR A CENTURY

In the Alpine region of the Swiss cantons of Vaud and Valais, according to the Paris L'Industrie Laitiere, cheesemakers preserve their products for years. Says this paper.

"They assert that the cheeses improve with age. At Ormonts, in the canton of Vaud, occurs the custom of making special cheeses for certain family festivals. These are properly labelled and are not eaten until several years later, on the occasion of some other festival, or even at a funeral repast. Often these cheeses are bequeathed from generation to generation as heirlooms. In recent years, at Ormonts, there was found hidden a cheese dating from 1785. It was as hard as a stone and had to be cut with a saw, but was nevertheless good."

Don't Be a Poodle Dog

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WHEN I say "don't spoil your sweetheart," I do not mean that you should not show her all the love and tenderness of which your heart is capable. I merely advise you not to act as though you were a trained dog ready to fetch and carry at her slightest whim.

It not only makes you appear a poor-spirited thing, but it makes her selfish and exacting.

It makes people pity you and dislike her.

Incidentally, it makes the girl herself think less of you.

Don't allow your devotion to destroy your dignity and self-respect. You must remember that if you spoil her while you are engaged, you will have to keep it up after you are married.

If you don't there will be tears and reproaches and accusations of wornout love, etc.

As far as you are concerned, it will probably be a case of ceasing to run after the car after you have caught it. You will be happy and content and still very much in love, but you won't be quite so keen on the fetch and carry business.

He Cannot Be a Slave

The married man cannot be the slave of his wife and amount to anything in the world.

Selfish, exacting wife is a loadstone round a man's neck, and a handicap in every sense of the word. The fact that he has made the situation will not lessen the burden. You can show your sweetheart every possible attention without becoming a slave to her whims.

Don't let her order you about as though you had no dignity nor will of your own.

It is a habit that will grow very quickly, and she won't be able to resist the temptation to display her power. And power of that sort is bad for a woman.

The power that she exercises for the happiness of others ennobles her, but the power that drives her to petty exactions and selfishness degrades her.

Respect Will Be Wanting

She will not really love you unless she respects you and she will not respect you if she feels that she can order you about like a tame poodle dog.

You must have a will of your own if you hope to hold a woman's love.

Any woman would tell you just what I am telling you, for all women at some time of their lives have known men whom they knew they could dictate to.

I have seen people fairly boil with indignation over the demands made by a spoiled girl on the man who loved her.

And always they have ended by saying, "Oh, well, if he is such a poor spirited thing he deserves all he gets."

When a girl gets into the habit of changing her mind forty times about a thing, ordering a man to do this and do that, to go here and go there, it is high time the man pulled himself together and made protest.

Hold her because she loves and respects you, not because she can order you about.

DAY'S BEST STORY

Apropos of Hall Caine's recent lawsuit, a friend of his said:

"Hall Caine is always talking about his health, his ruined nerves, insomnia and so forth. He is as proud of his invalidism as Sandow is of his muscles.

"The last time I saw Hall Caine was in his bed room in the Hotel Walton, in Philadelphia. The little, thin man, with his domelike forehead and weak, wispy brown whiskers, looked more like Shakespeare than ever.

"'Mr. Hall Caine,' I said. 'I hope you're well?'

"'Well?' he snarled. 'I'm far from well. I haven't slept, sir, for two weeks.'

"'Then,' said I, 'you are ever so much better; for the last time I saw you you hadn't slept for a month.'"

LITTLE DAUGHTER HAD SCALP HUMOR

Itched So that She Scratched Until Blood Came. Hair Fell Out. Scalp had Unpleasant Odor. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment Four Weeks. Scalp Perfectly Clear.

Hair Began to Grow Again and Now Has Beautiful, Long Hair.

"When my little daughter was about five years old, she was taken with the measles. A few weeks after the measles were gone, she began to have a severe scalp humor. It itched so that she would scratch the whole day, until the blood came. We had a doctor and tried a good many other remedies, but nothing helped. Her hair all fell out and the scalp itself had an unpleasant odor.

"After we had tried all the other remedies, my wife told me to try the Cuticura Remedies. We bought one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment. We used the Cuticura Remedies according to directions and in about three or four weeks her scalp was perfectly clear of the terrible humor. Her hair began to grow again and now she has beautiful, long hair. Since that time I have recommended the Cuticura Remedies to other people and they also had success. Chas. Salzbrenner, Amana, Iowa, Nov. 8, 1909."

The Illustrious Prince

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Synopsis.

HAMILTON FYNES, young, not particularly prepossessing, and giving no signs of great power, influence or wealth—quite an ordinary young man in fact—secures the immediate attention of the captain of the Lusitania on its arrival at Liverpool by the presentation of a mysterious letter. Because of the letter Fynes is immediately given the privilege of landing by special tug, while the other passengers are held over night.

At the office of the manager of the Northwestern Railway another letter secures the attention of all the officials of the line, with the result that a special train is placed at his service in record time and all the trains held up to give him free passage to London.

Fynes took unusual precautions upon entering the train, made extensive inquiries about the others who would make the trip as train hands, and made a thorough search of the special car, the brakeman's car and the porter's closet.

In passage he repeated his scrutiny, and satisfying himself that there was no one aboard who should not be, opened some mysterious papers.

When the train entered Crewe the station master went aboard the special to greet the personage who could command such unusual privileges.

The passenger was dead. He had been stabbed in the back and his papers stolen.

Scotland Yard detectives could find no clew to the slayer, nor how he boarded the train.

Meanwhile a strange young man was lying, sorely injured, by the roadside, fifteen minutes out of London. An auto approached and the chauffeur and the injured man talked in a strange tongue. The injured man was hurried to the office of Dr. Wiles and treated. He said he had been hurt in a bicycle accident and paid the doctor in gold.

CHAPTER IV.

Miss Penelope Morse.

IT was already a little past the customary luncheon hour at the Carlton, and the restaurant was well filled. The orchestra had played their first selection, and the stream of incoming guests had begun to slacken. A young lady who had been sitting in the palm court for at least half an hour rose to her feet, and, glancing casually at her watch, made her way into the hotel. She entered the office and addressed the chief reception clerk.

"Can you tell me," she asked, "if Mr. Hamilton Fynes is staying here? He should have arrived by the Lusitania last night or early this morning."

It is not the business of a hotel reception clerk to appear surprised at anything. Nevertheless the man looked at her, for a moment, with a curious expression in his eyes.

"Mr. Hamilton Fynes!" he repeated. "Did you say that you were expecting him by the Lusitania, madam?"

"Yes!" the young lady answered. "He asked me to lunch with him here to-day. Can you tell me whether he has arrived yet? If he is in his room, I should be glad if you would send up to him."

There were several people in the office who were in a position to overhear their conversation. With a word of apoogy, the man came round from his place behind the mahogany counter. He stood by the side of the young lady, and he seemed to be suffering from some embarrassment.

A Lady in the Case.

"Will you pardon my asking, madam, if you have seen the newspapers this morning?" he inquired.

Without a doubt, her first thought was that the question savored of impertinence. She looked at him with slightly upraised eyebrows. She was slim, of medium complexion, with dark brown hair parted in the middle and waving a little about the temples. She was irreproachably dressed, from the tips of her patent shoes to the black feathers in her Paris hat.

"The newspapers!" she repeated. "Why, no, I don't think that I have seen them this morning. What have they to do with Mr. Hamilton Fynes?"

The clerk pointed to the open door of a small private office.

"If you will step this way for one moment, madam," he begged.

She tapped the floor with her foot and looked at him curiously. Certainly the people around seemed to be taking some interest in their conversation.

"Why should I?" she asked. "Cannot you answer my question here?"

"If madam will be so good," he persisted.

She shrugged her shoulders and followed him. Something in the man's earnest tone and almost pleading look convinced her, at least, of his good intentions. Besides, the interest which her question had undoubtedly aroused amongst the bystanders was, to say the least of it, embarassing. He pulled the door to after them.

"Madam," he said, "there was a Mr. Hamilton Fynes who came over by the Lusitania, and who had certainly engaged rooms in this hotel, but he unfortunately, it seems, met with an accident on his way from Liverpool."

Her manner changed at once. She began to understand what it all meant. Her lips parted, her eyes were wide open.

"An accident?" she faltered.

He gently rolled a chair up to her. She sank obediently into it.

"Madam," he said, "it was a very bad accident indeed. I trust that Mr. Hamilton Fynes was not a very intimate friend or a relative of yours. It would perhaps be better for you to read the account for yourself."

He placed a newspaper in her hands. She read the first few lines and suddenly turned upon him. She was white to the lips now, and there was real terror in her tone. Yet if he had been in a position to have analyzed the emotion she displayed, he might have remarked that there was none of the surprise, the blank, unbelieving amazement which might have been expected from one hearing for the first time of such a calamity.

"Murdered!" she exclaimed. "Is this true?"

"It appears to be perfectly true, madam, I regret to say," the clerk answered. "Even the earlier editions were able to supply the man's name, and I am afraid that there is no doubt about his identity. The captain of the Lusitania confirmed it, and many of the passengers who saw him leave the ship last night have been interviewed."

"Murdered!" she repeated to herself with trembling lips. "It seems such a horible death! Have they any idea who did it?" she asked. "Has any one been arrested?"

"At present, no, madam," the clerk answered. "The affair, as you will see if you read further, is an exceedingly mysterious one."

Questioned By the Police.

She rocked a little in her chair, but she showed no signs of fainting. She picked up the paper and found the place once more. There were two columns filled with particulars of the tragedy.

"Where can I be alone and read this?" she asked.

"Here, if you please, madam," the clerk answered. "I must go back to my desk. There are many arrivals just now. Will you allow me to send you something—a little brandy, perhaps?"

"Nothing, thank you," she answered. "I wish only to be alone while I read this."

He left her with a little sympathetic murmur, and closed the door behind him. The girl raised her veil now and spread the newspaper out on the table before her. There was an account of the tragedy; there were interviews with some of the passengers, a message from the captain. In all, it seemed that wonderfully little was known of Mr. Hamilton Fynes. He had spoken to scarcely a soul on board, and had remained for the greater part of the time in his stateroom. The captain had not even been aware of his existence till the moment when Mr. Hamilton Fynes had sought him out and handed him an order, signed by the head of his company, instructing him to obey in any respect the wishes of this hitherto unknown passenger. The tug which had been hired to meet him had gone down the river, so it was not possible, for the moment, to say by whom it had been chartered. The station master at Liverpool knew nothing except that the letter presented to him by the dead man was a personal one from a great railway magnate, whose wishes it was impossible to disregard.

There had not been a soul, apparently, upon the steamer who had known anything worth mentioning of Mr. Hamilton Fynes or his business. No one in London had made inquiries for him or claimed his few effects. Half a dozen cables to America remained unanswered. That papers had been stolen from him—papers or money—was evident from the place of confinement in his coat, where the lining had been torn away, but there was not the slightest evidence as to the nature of these documents or the history of the murdered man. All that could be done was to await the news from the other side, which was momentarily expected.

The girl went through it all, line by line, almost word by word. Whatever there might have been of relationship or friendship between her and the dead man, the news of his terrible end left her shaken, indeed, but dry-eyed. She was apparently more terrified than grieved, and now that the first shock had passed away, her mind seemed occupied with thoughts which may indeed have had some connection with this tragedy, but were scarcely wholly concerned with it. She sat for a long while with her hands still resting upon the table but her eyes fixed out of the window. Then at last she rose and made her way outside. Her friend the reception clerk was engaged in conversation with one or two men, a conversation of which she was obviously the subject. As she opened the door, one of them broke off in the midst of what he was saying and would have accosted her. The clerk, however, interposed, and drew her a step or two back into the room.

"Madam," he said, "one of these gentlemen is from Scotland Yard, and the others are reporters. They are all eager to know anything about Mr. Hamilton Fynes. I expect they will want to ask you some questions."

The girl opened her lips and closed them again.

"I regret to say that I have nothing whatever to tell them," she declared. "Will you kindly let them know that?"

The clerk shook his head.

"I am afraid you will find them quite persistent, madam," he said.

"I cannot tell them things which I do not know myself," she answered, frowning.

"Naturally," the clerk admitted; "yet these gentlemen from Scotland Yard have special privileges, of course, and there remains the fact that you were engaged to lunch with Mr. Fynes here."

"If it will help me to get rid of them," she said, "I will speak to the representative of Scotland Yard. I will have nothing whatever to say to the reporters."

The clerk turned round and beckoned to the foremost figure in the little group, Inspector Jacks, tall, lantern-jawed, dressed with the quiet precision of a well-to-do man of affairs, and with no possible suggestion of his calling in his manner or attire, was by her side almost at once.

"Madam," he said, "I understand that Mr. Hamilton Fynes was a friend of yours?"

"An acquaintance," she corrected him.

"And your name?" he asked.

"I am Miss Morse," she replied,—"Miss Penelope Morse."

"You were to have lunched here with Mr. Hamilton Fynes," the detective continued. "When, may I ask, did the invitation reach you?"

"Yesterday," she told him, "by marconigram from Queenstown."

"You can tell us a few things about the deceased, without doubt," Mr. Jacks said, "his profession, for instance, or his social standing? Perhaps you know the reason for his coming to Europe?"

The girl shook her head.

"Mr. Fynes and I were not intimately acquainted," she answered. "We met in Paris some years ago, and when he was last in London, during the autumn, I lunched with him twice."

"You had no letter from him, then, previous to the marconigram?" the inspector asked.

"I have scarcely ever received a letter from him in my life," she answered. "He was as bad a correspondent as I am myself."

"You know nothing, then, of the object of his present visit to England?"

"Nothing whatever," she answered.

"When he was over here before," the inspector asked, "do you know what his business was then?"

"Not in the least," she replied.

Worked for the Government.

"You can tell us his address in the States?" Inspector Jacks suggested.

She shook her head.

"I cannot," she answered. "As I told you just now, I have never had a letter from him in my life. We exchanged a few notes, perhaps, when we were in Paris, about trivial matters, but nothing more than that."

"He must at some time, in Paris, for instance, or when you lunched with him last year, have said something about his profession, or how he spent his time?"

"He never alluded to it in any way," the girl answered. "I have not the slightest idea how he passed his time."

The inspector was a little nonplussed. He did not for a moment believe that the girl was telling the truth.

"Perhaps," he said tentatively, "you do not care to have your name come before the public in connection with a case so notorious as this?"

"Naturally," the girl answered. "That, however, would not prevent my telling you anything that I knew. You seem to find it hard to believe, but I can assure you that I know nothing. Mr. Fynes was almost a stranger to me."

The detective was thoughtful.

"So you really cannot help us at all, madam?" he said at length.

"I am afraid not," she answered.

"Perhaps," he suggested, "after you have thought the matter over, something may occur to you. Can I trouble you for your address?"

"I am staying at Devenham House for the moment," she answered.

He wrote it down in his notebook.

"I shall perhaps do myself the honor of waiting upon you a little later on," he said. "You may be able, after reflection, to recall some small details, at any rate, which will be interesting to us. At present we are absurdly ignorant as to the man's affairs."

She turned away from him to the clerk, and pointed to another door.

"Can I go out without seeing those others?" she asked. "I really have nothing to say to them, and this has been quite a shock to me."

"By all means, madam," the clerk answered. "If you will allow me, I will escort you to the entrance."

Two of the more enterprising of the journalists caught them upon the pavement. Miss Penelope Morse, however, had but little to say to them.

"You must not ask me any more questions about Mr. Hamilton Fynes," she declared. "My acquaintance with him was of the slightest. It is true that I came here to lunch to-day without knowing what had happened. It has been a shock to me, and I do not wish to talk about it, and I will not talk about it, for the present."

She was deaf to their further questions. The hotel clerk handed her into a taximeter cab, and gave the address to the driver. Then he went back to his office, where Inspector Jacks was still sitting.

"This Mr. Hamilton Fynes," he remarked, "seems to have been what you might call a secretive sort of person. Nobody appears to know anything about him. I remember when he was staying here before that he had no callers, and seemed to spend most of his time sitting in the palm court."

The inspector nodded.

With Noble Connections.

"He was certainly a man who knew how to keep his own counsel," he admitted. "Most Americans are ready enough to talk about themselves and their affairs, even to comparative strangers."

The hotel clerk nodded.

"Makes it difficult for you," he remarked.

"It makes the case very interesting," the inspector declared, "especially when we find him engaged to lunch with a young lady of such remarkable discretion as Miss Penelope Morse."

"You know her?" the clerk asked a little eagerly.

The inspector was engaged, apparently, in studying the pattern of the carpet.

"Not exactly," he answered. "No, I have no absolute knowledge of Miss Penelope Morse. By the bye, that was rather an interesting address that she gave."

"Devenham House," the clerk remarked.

"Do you know who lives there?"

The inspector nodded.

"The Duke of Devenham," he answered. "A very interesting young lady, I should think, that. I wonder what she and Mr. Hamilton Fynes would have talked about if they had lunched here to-day."

The hotel clerk looked dubious. He did not grasp the significance of the question.

MRS. PAUL DIXON ON TOUR OF EUROPE

Fashionables Are Flocking to Europe.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

At the rate at which our fashionables are flocking to Europe there will be few of them left at home by the time the festivities of the late summer are well under way. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Roland Dixon, whose wedding was a recent smart event at Newport, are about arriving in Europe, where they are to spend their honeymoon. Mrs. Dixon was Miss Julia Sands, and their marriage took place in Trinity Church, Newport, about a fortnight ago.

* * *

William Appleton Lawrence, son of Bishop Lawrence, and Davies Sohier are shortly going to Europe to join some class mates of Harvard, '11, for a motor tour in England and on the Continent. Mr. Sohier is the son of Colonel and Mrs. William D. Sohier of Beacon street.

* * *

Among other prominent Bostonians about arriving on the other side are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cunningham and Edward Cunningham, Jr., Mrs. Cunningham, daughter of Mrs. Charles E. Perkins, and Miss Alice Longfellow of Cambridge, with her nephews, Edmund Dana, Harvard, '09, and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana, Harvard '03, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Dana.

Grafton Cushing, Boston's tallest and wealthiest society bachelor, has also gone over for his annual holiday.

Mrs. Charles Frost Aldrich and her daughter, Miss Miriam Aldrich, and Miss Elizabeth Cheney, daughter of Mrs. Benjamin P. Cheney of "The Needles," Peterboro, N. H., have also gone. Mr. Cushing will be part of the time with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cushing, who are abroad for the Summer.

* * *

General Charles J. Paine, his daughter, Miss Georgina Paine, and his son, Frank C. Paine, and the Rev. and Mrs. Thatcher Kimball, General Paine's son-in-law and daughter have just arrived in Europe. Mr. Paine and his daughter went over last year at about the same time and returned in September.

* * *

Sailing at the same time with the Paines were Frederick R. Sears and Mrs. Edward Robinson, formerly of Boston, but now of New York; Edward Motley Weld, Hugh Miller, who married Miss Clara Fay, and Thomas Proctor of Commonwealth avenue.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Brooks are guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. Mortimer Brooks at their Newport villa.

* * *

The Misses Linscott are visiting Mrs. Gardiner Blanchard Perry.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, who have been at their Lancaster estate since closing their town house early in the season, have arrived at their Newport villa for the Summer. Their handsome brunette daughter, Miss Sally Thayer, is one of the belles of that fashionable resort. Mr. Thayer's daughter, Mrs. William S. Patton (Anna Thayer), has also gone to Newport.

* * *

An interesting engagement, the result of a steamer romance, just announced, is that of Miss Carolyn Crossett, daughter of Mrs. E. R. Crossett of New York, and Arthur Halcombe of Cambridge. Mr. Halcombe, who is a Harvard graduate, is to become structor in the economics department of the first met while returning from Europe.

* * *

Mrs. Samuel S. Sias of Lexington, has announced the engagement of her daughter, H. Caroline Sias, to William Wellington Phillips of Seattle, Wash.

* * *

Miss Theodora Sedgwick of Boston, is the guest of her brother, Arthur G. Sedgwick, at the Nunnery in Stockbridge.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Barton of Worcester, the parents of Miss Katherine Barton, whose engagement was recently announced to Dr. William E. Ladd, were among the guests whom Mrs. Marsden J. Perry entertained at her Newport villa over the week end.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. James Lowell Putnam, who sailed for Europe early in the season, have been spending much of their time in Paris. The Putnams are greatly missed this season at Bar Harbor, where they were important factors in the social life.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis L. Motte of Commonwealth avenue, who were in Europe last Summer, are at York Harbor this year, having leased a cottage in Barrell Lane. Dr. and Mrs. Elbridge G. Cutler, Miss Anna W. Cutler and George H. B. Cutler are other recent arrivals at this resort.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Leffingwell Spalding (Katherine Ames of North Easton), who have been making an extended automobile tour abroad, are to sail for home on July 28.

Tobias, Greenthal & Mendelson of 324-328 Lafayette St., N. Y., Sell at a Sacrifice on Account of Partner's Death

Right when their stock was in the pink of condition, the death of Mr. Henry Greenthal caused the firm of Tobias, Greenthal & Mendelson to close affairs up rather hurriedly in order to facilitate the final settlement of this partner's estate. This is a firm that does an enormous business—we buy thousands of dollars worth of goods from them in a regular way every year. Recognizing our colossal purchasing power, they gave us the first say, knowing full well that it would mean the disposal of their total stock if we went into it at all.

The details of the transaction won't interest you. When we got through with the dickering the entire stock on hand of this concern came to us at exactly 60 cents on the dollar—It goes to you with exactly the same shaving down in price.

LIGHT TRADING IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, July 8.—Union Pacific, Reading, Atchison and Southern Pacific were the favorites of trading in the stock market in Wall Street to-day. Business was on a light scale, but all the issues gained a point in the early trading. Atchison was particularly strong and crossed 97 on liberal purchases. Reading sold up to 144, but at that level there seemed to be considerable stock for sale. Specialties and public utilities were strong, in sympathy with the movement of the leaders.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

It is the proper time for a temporary recovery. For the last twenty years the stock market has seen its low figures for July somewhere in the first two weeks of the month. This has been true even when the year ended in a panic, as in 1907.

$ $ $

That stocks of a high grade and good income return are cheap at these prices no one is disposed to deny. The main reason why investors have been holding back is that they were in hopes they could them cheaper later on.

$ $ $

The market now is in such a condition that sentiment may be turned to the bull side easily enough, although the bears are in so confident a mood that undoubtedly they will attack it on every rally. As this is expected, however, the bulls will be in a position to know how to act.

$ $ $

No doubt exists that the taking of a lot of gold abroad for import has encouraged buyers of securities in great degree. Since the early part of 1908 more than $163,000,000 of the yellow metal has been sent out of this country, and it is about time that some of it was coming back.

$ $ $

While profits on both sides of the market are afforded to the daily trader who is alert and possesses quick judgment, the conservative opinion in the Street inclines to the idea that it is not wise for the investor to let the opportunities pass which are afforded by the declines.

$ $ $

The light trading in Hawley stocks is because they have not been widely distributed. Professionals are trying to talk them down, as they are too well protected to make short sales safe. Hawley has friendly alliances with so many strong interests that his stocks are not likely to cause any upset in Wall Street, even though a few dividends have to be reduced. His loans are fixed for a long time ahead and no forced selling is likely.

$ $ $

In Union Pacific an unpleasant situation is developing. President Lovett is a great railroad lawyer, but some of the operating heads under him are complaining that he is not an operating genius. This dissatisfaction has grown to such an extent that the directors are discussing the possibility of making Judge Lovett chairman of the board with full charge of financial matters, and Julius Kruttschnitt president in charge of operation.

$ $ $

It is the balance of trade against the United States that is at the bottom of the real worry of the bankers. At the moment this balance has been partially corrected by the sale abroad of railroad bonds. Those bond sales are nearly $200,000,000 smaller than they would have been had the Wickersham injunction not been issued. It is posible that more sales abroad may be accomplished, but prices in America are so high that bankers fear there may be no relief permanently through the export of perishable goods. The only way they see out of the difficulty is economy on the part of America. Present indications are that the imports will shrink $100,000,000 as a result of American economy.

$ $ $

Directors of the Steel Trust are now in possession of the figures for the second quarter of the year. They know exactly what the Trust earned in April, May and June, and are able to operate in the stock market backed by these advance figures. The Steel Trust has talked a great deal about publicity. Its stockholders and the general public should get these figures every month immediately after they are made up. A few favored speculators in Wall street get them regularly in advance from directors.

It has not yet been found expedient to transfer the shipment of Lake Rock to any of the Copper Range Consolidated mills and it is still going forward to the Franklin mill.

President Amster says: The recent developments in the properties working in the Black Hawk lode show that there will be no disappointment when sufficient depth is reached.

Going to Colorado ?

The 5 Electric Lighted Limited Trains of the Burlington Route offer you the best service thereto

On no other line can you get the same excellent service as on these luxuriously equipped trains from Chicago and St. Louis —three of which are only-one-night-on-the-road.

There is no better railroad than the Burlington—the entire line is equipped with block signals, the passenger equipment is the last result of the art of the modern car builder, powerful locomotives haul the heavy trains with ease over a solid road bed and passengers are assured of a safe, comfortable ride and arrival at destination "on time" with astonishing regularity.

I would like to tell you about these trains and send you our profusely illustrated [illegible] Colorado Handbook which tells [illegible] Colorado, its many resorts and the prices of board. Just say "Colorado Trains" on a postal and mail to me today.

LATHAM MAKES A NEW RECORD TO-DAY

RHEIMS, July 8.—Hubert Latham today in the aviation meet made a world's record when he did 147¾ kilometers in two hours. His figure for 2 hours, 9 minutes 28 4-5 seconds was 160 kilometers.

ALLEGED THIEF HELD.

William H. Marlow, an alleged pickpocket, who was caught after a long chase by passengers of an electric car, was held in the sum of $600 in the Dorchester court to-day on the charge of the larceny of over $100 from the person of Henry B. Oakman of Oakman street, Neponset.

T. B. REARDON DEAD.

Timothy B. Reardon of Lynn, a prominent member of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, died to-day at his home, No. 87 Hood street, Lynn, from blood poisoning caused by a carbuncle. Mr. Reardon was in the plumbing and gas fitting business.

DIGS UP MONEY IN OLD TIN CAN

NEWTON, N. J., July 8.—An innocent-looking, rusty tin can dug up at the Redgate farm contained quite a fortune for Michael Seaymons, a grading gang workman. Inside were a $100 and five $50 bills, evidently in the can for several years.

N. E. A. BULLETIN No. 3

WHEN Paul Revere made his memorable ride, it was the quickest way of gathering the farmers for the battle at the Old North Bridge.

TODAY there's a telephone every few feet along the same route, and communication is instantaneous.

BUT the service is not confined to neighborhoods. It covers thousands of square miles. Universal Service is the watchword of the Bell System—the possibility of reaching anyone, any time, anywhere.

THIS means not only your immediate neighbors, but 350,000 telephones connected to the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, and millions of Bell Subscribers in other parts of the country.

ALL these are your "neighbors," and within hailing distance if you have a telephone in your home or office.

MUTT AND JEFF LEAD AUTOISTS IN BASEBALL

By J. C. KERRISON.

Mutt and Jeff have broken into baseball circles of the motorists and to-morrow afternoon they will face each other in a bloodless battle for honor and glory at the outing of the Bay State Automobile Association at Bedford Springs.

Captain Coburn, who resembles Jeff only in height or lack of height is to marshall his "Jeffs" against tall and lanky Harry Howlett's "Mutts," who contend that they can put it all over the little fellows and then have something left up their sleeve.

The game will be played in costumes.

Ralph Coburn's outfit consists of Mutty, Ross, Grant, Penniman, R. Greene C. A. Gilmore, Warren, Ford, McIntire and a long list of alternates and substitutes. Harry Howlett's "gang" comprises Langmaid, Vail, Scott, Sullivan, Hudson, Vonnell, LeBon and Williams, all good and capable men who can make a noise as well as play ball.

Tom Glenn and Sim Baker are to be umpires, while Fred Ayres has been selected as chief scorer, and "Pop" Lowe will act as official chaser of the "Bawls."

Coburn promises to reward each member of his team reaching the home base with one of those long cool fellows, while Howlett says it will be a shame what he will do to his men who fail to reach home.

The start of the tour, the annual event of the Bay State Automobile Association will be 2 o'clock from the clubhouse, but it is not absolutely necessary to start with the party as the roads are always open, and Bedford Springs can be reached at any and all times. Some seventy-five members and friends have promised to participate in this outing, which will unquestionably be the one big thing in club life during the riding season.

W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., president of the Long Island Motor Parkway makes announcement that on Saturday, July 30, the "Motor Parkway Inaugural Sweepstakes" will be held on Long Island. There will be a sweepstakes amateur event at ten mile distances, a free-for-all event and a Class C event for cars from 301 to 600 cubic inches piston displacement without weight limitation.

Valuable cups will be given in the amateur and the Class C events, with first and second cash prizes of $100 and $50 in the free-for-all event.

The conditions for these two are practically identical with those that will prevail in the Vanderbilt cup race to be held on the parkway on October 1, and the grand prize race on October 15 this Fall.

It is expected that the amateur event will bring a large field of entries from the Amateur Contest Association, which body successfully promoted a hill-climb on Memorial Day. The amateur event will be a free-for-all for "simon-pure" amateurs.

The entry fee for each car will be $20. The timing will be done by the Warner electrical timing device. The start will be near Great Neck Lodge and the finish will be at the grand stand on Hempstead Plains. The greater portion of the course will be on the newly completed section of the parkway, which has a surface of tar-treated sand and gravel laid on cement. The curves are all scientifically worked for sustained light speed-sliding, slipping and skidding are eliminated and there is absolutely no dust. Phenomenal time undoubtedly will be made.

A Child's Footprint in the Dust

It Vanishes Soon—and So Does All the Work of the Greatest Man That Ever Lived

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

If you have seen a little barefooted child running along a dusty country road, you have noticed, with sympathy, the pathetic little footprints in the dust. The toes are so small and so distinct, the little heels so narrow—the whole footprint is so small; more like that of a bird than of a human being. If the child turns, you see a strange, inquiring, timid little face, under thick yellow hair, then more running and more of the little dusty marks in the road. You wonder where those feet are going in all the years ahead, where fate will take that child, what real mark, if any, it will make on the dust that we call Time, and the road that we call Progress.

One of the best mothers that ever lived said often that nothing impressed her about her children as much as their tiny hands and feet, and nothing could be more beautiful, more touching than the drooping hands of a child sleeping on its mother's breast—those hands are so little and so weak, yet they have in future so much work to do, so much trouble to meet, so many years of struggling, so many hours of working to obey the orders of a mind gradually developing.

How many sad thoughts a mother must have when she looks at the faces and the little delicate hands of her sleeping children, and wonders what the future has for them.

The thought that makes the lives of fathers and mothers so serious is beautifully expressed by Brian Hooker in the verses which he publishes in McClure's. Many a mother will find them a partial reflection of her mind as she looks at her own child:

Little groping hands that must learn the weight of labor,
Little eyes of wonder that must learn to weep—
Mother is thy life now; that shall be to-morrow.
Time enough for trouble—time enough for sorrow.
Now—sleep!

Little dumb lips that shall wake and make a woman,
Little blind heart that shall know the worst and best—
Mother is thy love now; that shall be hereafter.
Time enough for joy, and time enough for laughter.
Now—rest!

Little rosy body, new-born of pain and beauty,
Little lonely soul, new-risen from the deep—
Mother is thy world now, whole and satisfying.
Time enough for living—time enough for dying.
Now—sleep!

Deforming and Destroying Human Souls

All Over the Country Government Does This, IN THE NAME OF JUSTICE —The Case of One Boy

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

In England and in other "civilized" countries not so long ago they used to hang boys twelve years of age, and even younger, in the name of the law. We read of such things with horror.

It seems as dreadful to think of hanging a child of that age as it would be to hang a helpless, irresponsible idiot, or a child too young to walk.

It is very nice of us to shudder when we hear of the things that others USED TO DO. But we have cause enough for shuddering in our own acts, in the crimes that justice commits TO-DAY.

The tragic death of the Newman boy in the so-called Lyman Reform School in this State should bring this directly home to every Massachusetts man and woman.

All over this country "justice" takes boys that are mere children, lads in their teens, and sends them to the reformatory or the prison. And because they have made one mistake—which might have been forgiven—because they have shown certain evil tendencies, present to some extent in all of us human beings, tendencies that might have been eradicated by kindness, these unfortunate boys are put in with convicts, under hard masters, condemned to silent monotony, to mental dulness, despair—condemned to a permanent life of crime and hatred of society.

Take, for instance, the dreadful case of a little boy who is now in the Ohio Penitentiary.

Eight years ago, before this boy was twelve years old, he engaged in a quarrel with another boy, stabbed him—and the injured boy died.

While there was nothing to show that this hot-tempered, ungovernable boy intended to kill, his crime was abominable and dreadful.

But IS THAT CRIME COMMITTED BY A BOY OF TWELVE COMPARABLE IN VILLAINY WITH THE CRIME THAT "CIVILIZED SOCIETY" HAS SINCE COMMITTED AGAINST THAT BOY?

The boy was sentenced to TWENTY YEARS in the penitentiary, and to-day, twenty years old, he is still in the penitentiary with twelve years of his sentence still to be served.

Think what the life of that boy has been, think what his mind and soul and body will be like when he comes out of that prison. He has grown up in prison, absorbing only prison ideas.

It isn't sufficient to say, "What would you do with the boy?" And it is no excuse for society to ask the foolish question, "Would you condone a murder or forgive it?"

The question is WHAT RIGHT HAS SOCIETY TO TAKE A CHILD OF TWELVE, CONDEMN HIM TO A CRIMINAL CAREER, GRIND OUT HIS LIFE AND DESTROY HIS SOUL WITH TWENTY YEARS OF PRISON LIFE? Would it not have been infinitely more merciful, though seemingly more brutal, to act according to the old English law, and take that boy of twelve and hang him by the neck until dead?

Which would be more cruel, which would you prefer for your OWN child—to have him die suddenly, even violently, when twelve years old, or have him condemned to twenty years of prison life?

An effort is being made to secure a pardon for this Ohio boy, to get him out of jail, out into the sunlight, into the air of liberty before the prison life and prison associations have ruined him forever.

It is difficult to understand that any man with the power to pardon this boy should hesitate—unless it can be shown that he is hopelessly a criminal, and in that case he should be in an asylum under treatment and not in a prison, where criminals are manufactured and hardened.

Does any record of old-time cruelty, any quick ending in death, equal this record of slow brutality, dragging out through years, punishing formerly the child of twelve, now the boy of twenty, and propos- later to punish the man of thirty, for the crime caused by a vio- t, hasty act committed in childhood?

If we shudder at old English laws, hanging children for stealing a illings, be quite sure that real "civilization" in the future will with horror at the story of our modern crimes against humanity ering on every day and hour in our prisons.

How the Lines of Next Fall's Political Fight Are Shaping

The lines of the political battle to be fought in this State next Fall are shaping. They are becoming clearer and more distinct every day.

Governor Draper's speech at Harvard a few days ago is to furnish the text for the orators who go forth to speak for the Republican State ticket.

The report of Senator Lodge's committee to investigate the high cost of living is to be drawn upon by the candidates for Congress and their supporters.

The Democrats, in the fight against the Republican State ticket, will argue that, in spite of the Governor's boasted economy, the administration has been more extravagant, by at least one million dollars, than any that has preceded it.

They will argue that the Governor was more anxious to grant favors to the New Haven Railroad than he was to advance legislation for which there was a real popular demand.

The twisting and squirming of the Republican State organization, in its efforts to defeat the resolution calling for a national income tax, will be strongly pictured as an insult to President Taft, who requested such legislation, and as showing a disposition on the part of the Republican machine in this State to favor the rich.

The answer to Governor Draper's presentation of the real work done by the Legislature is that much of it would have been impossible except for the support of the Democratic members, and that the Governor himself is responsible for much of the special privilege legislation.

The Governor's veto of the eight-hour bill is bound to injure him immensely in the coming campaign.

The failure to pass laws that would ameliorate the conditions under which children are employed in some factories in this State ought to and will injure the prospects of the Republican party considerably.

In the congressional fights, if the Democrats make good nominations and are clever enough to prevent the injection of rancor and bitterness into the fights for nominations, they ought to be able to win at least two more districts, giving them a representation of five in the State delegation.

The report of the Lodge committee on the high cost of living ought to furnish the Democrats with just the sort of ammunition they need for an effective congressional campaign.

The Republicans will have no fight over their State ticket. They will have plenty of money. They will have Roosevelt in the State to aid them. They will have an army of well-trained spellbinders.

But, for all that, they are not optimistic. They have not recovered from last year's fight. That is why they are working so hard at this early stage of the game.

The Democrats may have a fight in their State convention. If they do they might just as well quit the next day. To be successful their State convention must be a peaceful one. It ought to be able to find a satisfactory State ticket without the use of a barrel or a bludgeon.

There will not be for many years another opportunity like the one presented to the Democrats this year. They have the issues that are popular with the people. It remains to be seen if they have sense enough to make a proper selection of candidates.

He Writes About Pa's Writer Friends

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WHAT are you crying about, sed Ma to Pa last nite. I ain't crying, sed Pa. Yure eyes looks awful red, sed Ma. Well, sed Pa, I mite as well own up that my eyes has shed a few un-availing teers. It is manly to weep for yure frends, sed Pa, & I am crying jest a littel for all them speshul writers that went cleer out to Reno for the prize fite wich has now passed into histry. They was moastly my friends, sed Pa, & I hate to think that they are coming back with thare brows puckered in deep thought.

I think the whole thing was a blot on civilizashun, sed Ma.

Maybe it was, maybe it was, but them speshul riters had to go jest the saim. Thay was sent out thare by thare managing edditors, & every one of them had a trunk full of adjecktivs, sed Pa, with sum adverbs & nouns in a littel suit case. I knew them all so well, Pa sed, that I was reeding every line they rote from the time they landed in Reno. Sum of them toald about the wunderful West, whare folks doant ask no questuns. Sum of them went to see Johnson, Pa sed, & rote sum letters back to thare papers saying that the big, black gladiator was nevver in the saim class with the Cave Man. Lissen to this sed Pa, one (1) of the clippings that I have saved out of the wreck. Then Pa read to us:

I went to see Jack Johnson this morning. He had jest returned from a littel light roadwork, bringing with him a chicken he had captured. His body shone like black marbel, the black marbel of Babylonia, whare thousands of dusky dancing gurls writhed to & fro in the Hanging Gardens of the dead past. His arms were as the arms of a gorilla, sinuous & strong to the last degree. He looked like one of the proud Afric slaves that marched behind the chariot of Scipio. I thought he was grate, grand, as he stood thare in all his barbaric buty, with that limp chicken in his mitey clutch, but until I went to see the big brown bear, Jeffries, I could not judge.

Now lissen to this part, Pa sed, about Jeff. Then I went to the camp of the troglodite, the brutal be-hemoth, the throwback, the man-mammoth, the cave man. When I saw him leaving his camp, accompanied by Jim Corbett & Bob Armstrong, I sed to him, Jim, how do you feel to-day. The hairy giant put his arm around my shoulder with the tender touch of a woman, & sed, Bob, old chap, I have known you a long time. I think that we were Vikings together in the days of Eric the Red. I have read much of the theery relating to the Transmigrashun of Souls. Bob, old chap, you can tell all of yure reeders & admirers that I am going to win in twelve rounds. I wuddent tell this to anyone but you, Bob.

Here is a other clipping, sed Pa, wrote by a other speshul riter wich is a frend of mine. Lissen:

Thare is a si-kology in all this, from which no man born of woman can turn away. When we think of Odin & Thor, members of the quenchless race, men that were of the sea & the litening, the tempest & the blood red sword, we know that Jeffries, one of the quenchless race, is coming into his own on the Fourth of July, not because he has bigger arms, bigger legs & a bigger heart, but because he comes of the quenchless race. Of such is the bear man, Jeffries.

What does he mean about the quenchless race? sed Ma to Pa.

He means, Pa sed, that thay cud nevver drink enuff to keep them from beeing thirsty.

The Roof of the World

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

THE explorers who are soon to attack the problem of discovering the South Pole will find themselves traveling on the very roof of the world. That will prove one of the sources of the difficulties that they will have to overcome.

It is one of the most surprising results of Lieutenant Shackleton's expedition that the Antarctic continent now appears to be, in mean elevation, the loftiest on the globe. The continent of Asia has hitherto held that rank, but its mean elevation appears to be far less than that of the towering continent clad with ice, and with great volcanoes bursting through its outer edge, which surounds the southern end of the earth's axis.

The German geographer, W. Meinardus, has recently calculated the elevation of the Antarctic continent from the best data now available, and he finds it to be upward of 6,000 feet, exceeding Asia by at least 2,500 feet and the other continents still more.

It appears, then, that this mysterious continent, of whose very existence the world has learned only in comparatively recent times, rises, in mean elevation, away above any other part of the earth's surface.

It forms a gigantic, glittering bulwark, covering the earth's southern pole, which must be visible to the telescopes of other planets as a startling protuberance of light, like the snowclad poles of Mars, but much more prominent and striking in appearance.

This strange fact becomes all the more remarkable when we compare with the lofty and lonely continent of the Far South the deep oceanic basin which surrounds the North Pole of our planet. How has it come about that one pole of the earth is situated in a profound depression, filled by the sea, while the opposite pole rises high on the vast back of a continental mass, whose average elevation is more than a mile above the level of the sea?

Does this curious condition have an effect upon the rotation of the earth on its axis and play a part in producing that singular "wabbling" of the axle of the globe, the discovery of which is one of the triumphs of modern exact observation?

Lieutenant Shackleton's expedition found the remains of ancient forms of life, of a high organization, in the frost-splintered and ice-burned rocks of the Antarctic. We have as yet no evidence that man ever dwelt there; but he may have done so.

The Antarctic Continent now begins to loom so vast before the imagination that it bids fair to become within a few years the cynosure of the world—the great object toward which the intelligent curiosity of all nations will be directed.
